Council paves way for concrete project to start

■ Mayor returns to cast deciding 3-2 vote as councilwoman's final plea fails to sway her colleagues.

By KENDALL KLYM

THE DEBATE is over.

As of Monday morning, Ocean Avenue between Carpenter and Junipero will begin to shed its washboard stomach for an even harder but smoother surface — abs of concrete.

Crews will begin to tear up the bumpy asphalt lying on top of 70-year-old cement along the hilly road and fill it in with concrete — a project that has received much debate. Carmel City Council members have haggled over the issue of whether to opt for asphalt or concrete since August 1995.

During the past few months, some council members have personalized the issue, turning the debate into a dramatic expression of who cares more about the well-being of Carmel and its citizens.

Final debate

At Tuesday's council meeting, the issue came to a head, as both sides battled it out before a deciding vote was cast.

Councilwoman Barbara Livingston made a final plea to the city to at least consider asphalt. But, with Mayor Ken White present at the meeting, Livingston's 11th-hour plea was to no avail.

White, who was absent at the September meeting in which council voted 2-2 on a motion to accept a bid of $341,341 from Granite Construction, cast the deciding vote

In his return to the council, Ken White cast a key vote on the concrete-asphalt debate at Tuesday's meeting.

'NOT A SECOND THOUGHT'

Carmel man cited for saving local woman's life

By KRISTI BELCAMINO

DAVID ALLAN attributes his heroism to an ancient mariners unwritten, unspoken law: You always help someone in trouble at sea.

"Mariners don't give it a second thought," said Allan, a Carmel resident. "You see someone at sea in trouble and you take care of them. That's all there is to it."

But in this case, it saved someone's life.

Last December, Allan, a fisherman, surfer, teacher and artist, didn't think twice about grabbing his surfboard and jumping into turbulent, frigid water to save a woman clinging to the rocks at the base of a cliff near The Lodge in Pebble Beach. The woman had slipped and fallen from the 30-foot cliff above.

Monday, Allan was honored with the Coast Guard's Silver Lifesaving Medal at ceremonies at the Monterey Coast Guard Station on Lighthouse for saving the life of Pebble Beach resident Elizabeth Jamieson.

And to his surprise, Jamieson attended the ceremony.

She had sent him a "thank you" note around New Year's last year, but had felt remiss that she had not done more. So she showed up in person to thank him on Monday.

"I'm just really appreciative," said Jamieson. "I just don't know how you can thank someone for saving your life."

Jamieson and Allan believe they have a special bond and that the lifesaving act was meant to happen.

"Maybe God brought us together for that moment," said Allan.

"I believe that, too," said Jamieson.

Both believe it was more than a coincidence.

"This (happened because) of a series of coincidences," said Allan. "It was just a spur-of-the-minute thought to look at the ocean from that place, and that timing, it was almost random that I pulled up at exactly

Carmel mayor returns to duty; appreciative of town's concern

By KENDALL KLYM

AFTER HAVING a disc removed from his spine recently, Mayor Ken White was back in full gear Tuesday afternoon at the October Carmel City Council meeting. White said he was thankful for all the cards, calls and letters he received while recovering.

During the meeting, White raised the heavy binder consisting of the Draft Fort Ord Reuse General Plan high over his head to dispel any doubts as to his strength.

Only Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac dared to ask him, "Are you doing OK?" later in the meeting.

The mayor answered with an earnest "yes."

"I was in real great condition before I had this problem," White said after the meeting.

Councilman Bob Fischer played chauffeur for White, who walked with a cane to the car.

State: Beach bathrooms must get permits

Kersnar says city intends to comply with request from Coastal Commission

By KENDALL KLYM

JUST WHEN the city staff thought the fuss over a portable bathroom on the beach had died down, the state stepped into the issue, informing the city it has failed to meet permit requirements.

Lee Otter, district chief planner for the California Coastal Commission, has sent a letter to City Administrator Jere Kersnar telling him the city has failed to apply for a coastal permit for an existing portable facility, located near the southern city limits on Scenic and Santa Lucia.

The letter states that permits are necessary for the existing facility and the recently approved one on the beach. It suggests the city produce one application for both facilities, or remove the existing one within 60 days and abandon plans for the second.

Heated debate

In its effort to accommodate Carmel beach goers with an adequate number of restrooms, the city has endured much public debate over the issue of building a portable restroom in the vicinity of Scenic and Eighth. The Forest and Beach Commission voted 4-2 last week to approve a port-a-potty somewhere at the lower portion of the beach. Opponents of the project were livid over the decision.

Now city staff members are upset with the state over what appears to be a matter of miscommunication.

In an interview with the Pine Cone, Kersnar said he thought the city had a verbal agreement with the commission to postpone the application for a permit until the second facility was approved.

"We know that a permanent installation requires coastal permission," Kersnar said emphatically. "They (at the commission) agreed to hold off. We've been in constant communication with the Coastal Commission. I don't understand the letter."

Kersnar said the city will "proceed appropriately" with the matter.

Begging to differ

In a separate interview, Otter said he did not recall any verbal agreements to postpone the application but admitted he has served as a district chief planner for only a short time.

"We're not trying to create problems," Otter said. "Our principle in the matter is: Whoever you are, there is no development in a coastal zone without a permit."

Once the permit application is received and deemed complete, Otter said, it will appear on the agenda of the next commission meeting.

He said the issue may appear on the agenda at the Dec. 10-13 C.C.C. meeting, to be held in San Francisco.

At last, the solution for our freeway, water woes

WHAT this Peninsula needs is more profound thinkers like Carmel's Erik Davidson!

We Lilliputian thinkers sweat and strain (bodies all aching and racked with pain) over seemingly hopeless dilemmas like the Hatton Canyon Freeway and the proposed New Los Padres Dam, but to Erik the solutions are mere child's play.

"I cannot believe," he said, buffing his nails, "that the simplicity of a COMBINED solution has not occurred to the people in charge. It's all so obvious."

Then The Great One went on to reveal WHAT is so obvious:

"PRO-GROWTH people want more water, and that's why they're bucking for a new dam, right?"

Me — "Right."

"ENVIRONMENTALISTS are concerned about the negative impact the proposed Hatton Canyon Freeway would have, right?"

Me — "Right."

"THEY are particularly concerned because of the canyon's significance as a 'wetland,' right?"

Me — "Right."

"WELL, Dorothy," he exclaimed triumphantly, flicking a speck off his ascot, "the answer has been crystal clear all along:

"Dam Hatton Canyon!"

Me — "My name isn't Dorothy."

ERIK, ignoring our whimpering — "The pro-growth people will be happy because they'll have more water.

"The environmentalists will be happy because the New Los Padres Dam won't be built and no freeway will be built through Hatton Canyon, either. And, in addition, the canyon's wetlands will get even wetter!"

THE DEEP thinker wasn't through. "Since Hatton Canyon residents will have lakefront property when this thing happens," he said, "they'll be ecstatic as they watch their property values skyrocket!

"It's a win-win-win solution. What could be better?"

WOW! I'm sold! Solomon was great at figuring stuff out in his day (10th century B.C.), but in today's complicated world of saltwater intrusion, Dennis Rodman and the Macarena, give me Erik Davidson every darn time!

WHAT the Alliance on Aging needs is another "showcase house" they can use as a fund raiser.

What they do is invite local interior designers to redo the inside of the house (each one taking a different room) and local landscapers to redo or gussy up the grounds.

THEN when it's all done, they charge admission to the public to come see how snazzy the place looks, and how creative the designers and landscapers can be!

That's how they raise their funds.

"BUT," says Edie Karas, the Alliance's chief showcase house hunter, "we need a house of about 6,000 square feet or more to do it right. If you know of such a house that might be available, please call me at 373-6436."

By the way, the owner gets the house back when it's over.

AMONG "showcase houses" they've done in the past are the Allen Griffin home in Pebble Beach and the Flanders Mansion in Carmel, so it has to be a pretty good-sized place.

We immediately thought of the Pine Inn and the Carmel Valley Inn — ANYTHING you do to their lobbies would be merciful (one is Hong Kong

New Water Setback

'Big day' comes and goes; resolution could be several months away

By PAUL WOLF

THOSE HOPING to move forward with stalled residential projects in Carmel have experienced a setback that will delay the availability of water on the Peninsula for several weeks

And depending on what a judge decides sometime before the holidays, the delay could last several months.

Carmelites most affected by the setback are those who have awaited the availability of water — Tuesday was supposed to have been the big day — in order to sell, remodel or redevelop their property.

Carmel, which ran out of residential water in April, was posed to receive its share (16.75 acre-feet) of a new allocation (150 acre-feet) from the Peninsula water board to eight jurisdictions.

Last week, however, opponents of the allocation, arguing that more water should not be passed out during the ongoing shortage, successfully petitioned Superior Court Judge Richard Silver to issue an injunction against the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

Water-poor Peninsula jurisdictions were prepared Oct. 1 to receive temporary relief until major water-supply projects are developed over the coming years.

"We knew this injunction was likely to occur," said Carmel Senior Planner Rick Tooker. "Not having water affects the lives of many people who have been waiting to

Sheriff's Log

Carmel Highlands pot bust nets $80,000 in plants

HERE'S A look at the more significant items of activity logged by the Monterey County Sheriff's Department from Tuesday, Sept. 24 through Sunday, Sept. 29.

"Carmel" entries do not include calls from within the city limits of Carmel-by-the-Sea, which is under the jurisdiction of the Carmel Police Department.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 24

Carmel: A man reported being the victim of an assault by one of his tenants.

Carmel Valley: Nothing was found missing from a residence that was reported to have been unlawfully entered.

Carmel Valley: A woman reported having a problem with her 15-year-old daughter regarding curfew.

Carmel Valley: A lock to a storage room door was reported cut. It is unknown if anything had been taken.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 25

Big Sur: A man reported a possible case of fraud.

Carmel Valley: A woman reported having problems with her neighbors who use an easement near her residence. The woman reported that the neighbors in question constantly speed near where her children play.

Carmel Highlands: Deputies from the Sheriff's Department Marijuana Eradication Team confiscated a marijuana garden growing in a remote area of Garrapata Beach State Park. The garden, which had previously been spotted during random aerial overflights, consisted of 74 flowering female sensimilla plants. The plants, altogether valued at $80,000, were being watered by a drip irrigation system fed from an adjacent creek.

Carmel: A store reported that a woman left without paying for a set of photographs she had developed.

Carmel: A business reported that someone removed $200 in $1 bills from its change machine.

Carmel: A male juvenile reported that he had been grabbed and thrown to the ground by a man who was reportedly angry at having his right-of-way blocked by skateboarders.

Carmel: A woman reported that a threatening message had been left on her answering machine by an unknown male.

Big Sur: A man turned in a wallet that was found in the parking lot of Pfeiffer State Beach.

Pebble Beach: A woman reported that when she returned to her residence she found her door unlocked and her lights on. A check of the house revealed nothing sinister.

Carmel: A woman reported that during an argument with her male roommate, he pointed a rifle at her and threatened to kill her. The roommate had fled by the time deputies arrived; his firearm was placed into evidence.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 26

Carmel Valley: During an argument with her juvenile son regarding his purchase of a used car, a woman reported that her son became angry, left the residence and possibly went over to a relative's house. The woman, who stated she was not worried about her son's safety, said she would inform deputies when he returns home.

Carmel Valley: A woman reported seeing a man and two juvenile males, all of whom were carrying rifles, get into a truck. She thought the three might be engaged in poaching. The case was referred to the State Fish and Game office.

Pebble Beach: A woman reported a possible case of fraud involving a mail-order company based in Florida that began making monthly debits from her checking account for merchandise she hadn't ordered. It was later discovered that the woman had unwittingly given verbal consent for the purchases over the phone.

Carmel: A movie theater reported the theft of an undisclosed amount of money from its cash drawer.

Colleagues mourn loss of deputy killed in auto accident

UNLIKE MANY people, Sheriff's Deputy Anthony "Tony" Olson loved to come to work — and everyone at work loved to be around him.

He will be remembered for his great sense of humor, his energy, his positive attitude and his bounty of ideas.

Tony Olson

Mr. Olson, 36, was killed last Tuesday night when his patrol car skidded off the road and slid over a 400-foot cliff on the south side of Arroyo Seco Road near Greenfield. He was responding to a report of a domestic disturbance.

Mr. Olson, a Monterey resident, had been with the department for 4 1/2 years. Initially, he worked in corrections, but had served as a patrol officer for the last 14 months. He was single and had no children.

A memorial service was held for Mr. Olson on Tuesday afternoon in Salinas. Nearly 200 people were in attendance, including more than 100 of Mr. Olson's co-workers in the department.

A reception in the sheriff's honor was held following the service.

With kids in mind, area gears for 'Week Without Violence'

YWCA spearheading several events to mark week

By KRISTI BELCAMINO

FROM THE outside, the Monterey Peninsula appears to be a sheltered haven from big-city crime and violence, but kids around here have a different story to tell.

Pacific Grove students recently wrote letters to the YWCA of Monterey Peninsula describing the violence in their lives — everything from one student seeing his own grandmother shot to others being afraid to be home alone.

"I read those letters last night," said YWCA executive director Carol Ludowise on Monday. "And if anything, these children are crying out for violence to stop. They've all had violence touch their lives."

In recognition of the Oct. 6-12 National Week Without Violence, the YWCA of the Monterey Peninsula gave local teachers materials on violence and the outpouring of letters was the result of a classroom project.

> These kids are all scared. I'm hoping this forum can really wake people up to the fact that our kids are the ones who are suffering. Our future generations are going to suffer unless we put a stop to this.
> — Carol Ludowise
> YWCA executive director

The YWCA is spearheading several events to mark the week without violence on the Monterey Peninsula, including a community workshop, "Diversity and Common Ground," on Monday and a free community forum on violence Saturday, Oct. 12.

The community forum will include discussion of gang violence, family violence, violence against women and will feature representatives from Women's Crisis Center, Rape Crisis Center, YWCA, Parents of Murdered Children and Barrios Unidos, along with others whose work deals with violence and its aftermath.

Facilities will be set up to fingerprint children and McGruff (The Crime Dog) will make an appearance.

After reading the letters from the Pacific Grove students, Ludowise believes the forum is even more important.

"These kids are all scared," she said. "I'm hoping this forum can really wake people up to the fact that our kids are the ones who are suffering. Our future generations are going to suffer unless we put a stop to this."

Ludowise said the forum is an "awareness and conscious-raising effort," tied in to other YWCA efforts around the nation.

"This forum is going to bring together people who work with violence day in and day out to speak to the public," she said.

In addition, several other events mark the week without violence.

Several local mayors have issued proclamations on the week and the Monterey City Library will display YWCA and domestic violence information.

On Tuesday, the Commission on the Status of Women will present a proclamation to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors and on Wednesday, schools will concentrate on violence in their curriculum.

She hopes the emphasis on the national week without violence will have a ripple effect and will inspire people to become aware of violence in their lives throughout the whole year.

"Watching our language, being kind to one another, talking things out instead of resorting to fists and guns and those kinds of things — it starts with each one of us as individuals."

TINY ITEMS, MIND TO MATCH . . . Will somebody please explain to Colleen Rice and me why in the name of Ned the Monterey Park Police Department (Los Angeles County) had a public auction here Saturday at the DoubleTree Hotel of stuff they had confiscated over the past year?

It included jewelry, Persian rugs, jade carvings, etc., but why here? Why not in Monterey Park? Do we buy more confiscated stuff than they do?

JUDIE Garcia, the stunning news anchor at San Jose's KNTV (cable 7 here) who packed it in a couple of weeks ago to take a vacation before accepting one of a batch of offers from the top market areas in the U.S., finally made her move.

She accepted a post as reporter and anchor fill-in with WLS in Chicago, the ABC-owned station there.

THE PETITE Latina, an outstanding talent, was being courted by stations in New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco in addition to Chicago.

MARIA Kennedy of Salinas wonders if this were a Freudian slip or simply a burst of honesty:

In a taped KCBA promotional announcement hyping the station's lone local news program, anchor Andrew Amador says:

"NO question, I think the timing of our show (10 p.m.) is perhaps its most exciting element."

Maria — "The TIME is the most exciting thing on the whole show?"

Shame on you, Maria. That can't be what he meant. Not old Andrew.

AND this may be as good a time as any to report the July ratings (the latest month tested) for local news programs of the area's four TV stations here.

Remember, KSBW (the NBC affiliate) always wins the ratings wars here. But in July it had an additional trump card — NBC had exclusive coverage of the Olympics! — so don't expect any upsets in the usual outcome of the ratings.

FOR the record, KSBW's 5, 6 and 11 p.m. local news programs had ratings of 10.6, 13.8 and 5.9, respectively, among persons 18 and over.

Comparable figures for KCCN news at those times were 1.3, 1.3 and 1.4.

KSMS's only local news is at 6 p.m., which recorded a respectable 4.0 for the Spanish language station. KCBA's lone local news at 10 p.m. tallied a 1.4.

As good old Frenchman Alphonse Karr (you remember old Al) said in 1848 after seeing KSBW's local news ratings that year:

"THE MORE things change, the more they remain the same."

Particularly during an Olympics year, Al.

ALWAYS LAST TO KNOW . . . Good grief, while my back was turned, Tony Roma's restaurant, overlooking the marina at the entrance to Fisherman's Wharf No. 2 in Monterey, flew the coop!

Why the chain bailed out three weeks ago is a puzzlement, but in there now is a restaurant called Memphis Blues, which the fella on the phone there assured us serves the same kind of food as Roma's (ribs, etc.), "but with a much bigger menu."

DID he mean it lists more items? Or is it a billboard-size menu with very large type? Rats, I forgot to ask.

New Peninsula couple christens CHOMP's birth center

By KRISTI BELCAMINO

AWAY FROM the hustle and bustle of the rest of the hospital, the new Family Birth Center is an oasis of calm and tranquility for expectant parents and family.

Last Thursday, Charlene and Scott Wales were the first parents to experience Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula's new birthing facilities when their baby girl, Caroline, was born.

"It was just wonderful," Charlene said of the center. "Once you get there you can just unpack all your things and stay."

Unlike traditional deliveries, expectant mothers in the Family Birth Center stay in one large and brightly decorated room for the duration of their stay, instead of being wheeled from room to room for labor, delivery and recovery.

As Charlene put it: "They roll medical carts with all the equipment in to you, instead of rolling you around."

The center has been planned for several years. Phase one was recently completed, adding a kitchen, an outpatient testing room, a conference room, a large waiting area, two surgery rooms and seven new birthing rooms. Phase two will add six more birthing rooms and a recovery room for women who require cesarean sections.

Since Caroline's birth, the center has been busy with another 25 to 30 births taking place.

Bright and airy

Entry to the center is marked by a bronze statue of Dennis the Menace donated by Hank Ketcham.

Ketcham, a local and nationally renowned illustrator, was commissioned by CHOMP to do a series of paintings for the center.

The waiting room is bright and airy with cushy furniture on the floors and rounded skylights dotting the cavernous ceiling.

The Wales' room had colorful art work, a gigantic shower that could fit them both, a long couch for family members to nap on, a high-tech lighting system above the bed and soundproof walls.

"I didn't hear other people screaming down the hall and there were times when I wasn't screaming, so I could have heard them," said Charlene.

The rooms also have their own adjustable thermostats, which Charlene found to be a blessing when her own temperature rose.

The Wales moved to Monterey in June from Virginia and Charlene was thankful they were in Monterey when Caroline was born.

"It was a very positive experience," she said. "It was not a scary thing. It was a very favorable experience and I feel very fortunate that I was able to be here in Monterey to use the birth center."

Charlene and Scott Wales, who moved to Monterey in June from Virginia, are the proud parents of a baby girl, Caroline, who earned the distinction of being the first child born at Community Hospital's new Family Birth Center.

Briefly Speaking

Saturday: Carmel walking tour on tap

CARMEL HERITAGE, a preservation organization, will offer a historic walking tour of downtown Carmel with Kay Prine beginning at 1 p.m. Saturday at the Welcome Center, located at Lincoln and Sixth.

A $5 donation is suggested.

Reservations: 624-4447.

Sunday: 'Wild Celebration' renewed

THE SPCA of the Monterey Peninsula will again hold "A Wild Celebration" from 3 to 6 p.m. Sunday at Holman Ranch in Carmel Valley.

Refreshments, auction items and door prizes will be included at the event. Among the nearly 200 items to be auctioned include AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am passes, Quail Lodge golf packages, restaurant certificates and participation in a Great Horned Owl release.

Funds raised will go toward the rehabilitation and release of the 3,000 injured or orphaned wild animals that are rescued by the SPCA each year.

Tickets are $30 per person.

Tickets and information: 646-WILD.

Monday: Sunset Center EIR in spotlight

THE FALL meeting of the Northeast Carmel Neighbors' Association will be held at 4:30 p.m. Monday at the Vista Lobos Meeting Room, located at Junipero and Second.

Topics for discussion at the meeting include the Sunset Center renovation proposal and an update on ambulance service in Carmel.

Brian Donoghue, community and cultural director for the City of Carmel, will be on hand to lead a discussion on the ideas presented in the final Sunset Center Environmental Impact Report.

More information: 625-1602.

Monday: Camps for kids to get start

BEGINNING NEXT week, the Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary will offer two one-week education sessions for children in third through fifth grades. The camps will run from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, and transportation will be provided from the mouth of Carmel Valley to Big Sur.

■ "Condors to Kayaks," which runs from Monday through Friday, Oct. 11, will focus on what children can do to protect the earth. Activities will include kayaking on the Monterey Bay, participating in the Sanctuary's bird-banding research project, hiking, games and crafts.

■ "Exploration Odyssey," from Monday Oct. 14 through Friday, Oct. 18, will take children to redwood forests, ocean bluffs, waterfalls and the Big Sur River. The plants and animals of each area will be discovered through the use of binoculars, hand lenses, dip nets and field guides.

Reservations/more information: 624-1296.

Tuesday: Doctor leads Monterey forum

GERONTOLOGIST DR. Donald Murphy will discuss medical ethical issues, caring for the elderly and health care reform at a free forum at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Steinbeck Forum of the Monterey Conference Center.

Murphy is founder and director of the Colorado Collective for Medical Decisions and the author of Honest Medicine: Shattering the Myths of Aging and Health Care.

Election '96 Roundup: Measure M in spotlight today

AS THE Nov. 5 general election draws closer, the candidates and ballot measures are the focus of various local events. Here's a closer look:

■ Tonight: The Monterey Bay Chapter of the Association of Environmental Professionals will hold an informational forum concerning the 20,000-acre Rancho San Carlos project from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District offices, located at 24580 Silver Cloud Court, Monterey.

Speakers at the forum on Measure M will be Jeffrey Froke, spokesperson for Rancho San Carlos; and Bruce Dormody, a nearby resident and opponent of the project.

More information: 637-5313.

■ Tonight: Noel Mapstead's Committee Against the Rancho San Carlos Subdivision will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in the Community Room of The Barnyard, Carmel Rancho shopping center.

Mapstead invites representatives of the Rancho San Carlos partnership and anyone else who supports or opposes Measure M to join in the forum.

A similar forum also will be held from at the same time the following Thursday (Oct. 10) at Sunset Center's Carpenter Hall.

More information: 633-5784.

■ Saturday: In opposition to Proposition 209, the American Association of University Women of the Monterey Peninsula will present a talk titled "Eight Myths About Affirmative Action" from 10 a.m. to noon in the Community Room at The Crossroads shopping center in Carmel.

Speaker Michelle Welsh, a Pacific Grove attorney, is chairwoman of the American Civil Liberties Union's legal committee.

More information: 626-1412.

■ Saturday: A candidates' forum will be held from 9 a.m. until noon in the Oldemeyer Center, located a 986 Hilby Ave, Seaside.

Candidates who have already confirmed their participation in the forum include Fifth District supervisorial hopeful Dave Potter, 27th State Assembly candidates Fred Keeley and Jim Davis, Marina and Pacific Grove candidates as well as the entire field vying for Seaside mayor and seats on the Seaside City Council.

■ Monday: The deadline to register to vote in the Nov. 5 general election is Monday.

Forms are available at post offices, city halls and public libraries. Individuals may call the Monterey County Election Department at 755-5085 to have forms mailed to them.

In addition, the election department, located at 1370 B South Main St. in Salinas, will have office hours from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. in order to accommodate last-minute registrations.

The department emphasizes that voters are required to reregister if they have moved, changed their name or changed political party affiliation.

■ Wednesday: A public forum on Propositions 208 and 212 will be held at 7 p.m. in the Salinas Courthouse's Conference Room, second floor of the East Wing.

The propositions both propose reform in California campaign finance regulations, including contribution and spending limits. A state representative for Proposition 208 and the statewide coordinator for Proposition 212 will be on hand to explain the implications of the propositions.

The forum is hosted by the Monterey County Task Force on Campaign Finance Reform, which was established by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

More information: 755-5045.

CVHS in spotlight at CUSD meeting tonight

In quest for 'better balance,' high school eyes curriculum upgrades, restructuring plan

BY KRISTI BELCAMINO

ALTHOUGH CARMEL Valley High School has been commended for its teaching methods, it isn't going to rest on its laurels.

Instead, the Carmel Unified School District is looking at program improvements and curriculum upgrades for the school.

A special CUSD meeting on restructuring the school is scheduled for 7 tonight at the Carmel Middle School library.

The school has also sought the services of Brother Steve Johnson, a consultant and director of the Center for Family, School and Community at the University of Santa Clara, to help prepare new standards and programs.

Advice from a "guru"

Carmel Valley High School Principal Blake Fuessenich calls Johnson the "guru of alternative education" and said Johnson is a consultant for Alameda, Contra Costa and schools in Texas.

"He is a national figure, and when he gives his blessing we can go with confidence in our little school," said Fuessenich.

Fuessenich said Carmel Valley High School has 35 to 40 students right now. It's maximum is 45.

Fuessenich said 90 percent of the school's current instruction is individual work and assignments given by teachers — what he calls a "diagnostic, prescriptive tutorial approach."

He said this is an effective teaching method and he wants to keep this method, but include small group instruction in the curriculum.

"We want to get a better balance," said Fuessenich. "We're going to have a core program which emphasizes reading, writing and social skills, along with a math lab which will be open two hours a day for students."

He said the new program will give the curriculum greater cohesion and a solid theme.

"That's the balance," he said. "We don't want to short change what we are doing, which is successful; we want to add something we feel will give better education services and ensure every student leaving the school will be very strong in those areas."

New technology

In addition, tonight's meeting will formalize the school board's acceptance of a proposal for technology at the school.

Fuessenich said the school is trying to tap into a $25,000 one-time state grant so they can get six new computers and software.

"Students can then do lessons across the curriculum by CD-Rom, and that will strengthen and enlarge that aspect of the school as well," he said. "It's really neat; it should be the kind of stuff that resonates well with students."

Fuessenich said he wants the new curriculum to continue individualized instruction, which fills in holes in students educational backgrounds, but to also make giant leaps in small-group instruction which focuses on basic skills.

"The bottom line is we should have a stronger, more enriching, more complex curriculum and therefore more student learning," he said.

Public gets final chance to comment on Fort Ord plan

THE LAST hearing staged to receive public comments on the Draft Fort Ord Reuse Plan and environmental impact report (EIR) is slated for 7 to 9 p.m. Monday at the Monterey Conference Center's Steinbeck Forum.

In addition to oral comments, written comments may be presented at the meeting. All written correspondence concerning the plan, EIR and reuse business plan must be submitted no later than Oct. 11.

They can be sent to the Fort Ord Reuse Authority, 100 12th St., Building 2880, Marina, CA 93933. Comments may also be faxed to FORA at 883-3675.

Davi, Potter have some common ground, key differences

■ Lively forum underscores candidates' planks

By PAUL WOLF

CONTRARY TO what some may believe, supervisorial candidates Jeff Davi and Potter don't disagree on everything.

For starters, Davi, a Monterey-based Realtor, and Potter, a contractor and a Monterey City Councilman, agree that the Fort Ord reuse plan allows for more growth than the Peninsula can comfortably handle.

★ ELECTION '96 ★

Both would like to see the plan reflect further cutbacks in the number of people and vehicles that will be introduced into the area as the reuse is phased in over a period of decades.

In addition, the two candidates for 5th District Monterey County supervisor oppose the proposed Pebble Beach Lot Program, which would allow for 350 new homes in Del Monte Forest and an 18-hole championship golf course next to Spyglass Hill.

The current 5th District supervisor, Sam Karas (who is not seeking re-election), said in July that he favors only new 150 homes.

Finally, as Davi and Potter reflect on the resounding defeat last November of Measure C — the New Los Padres Dam — both oppose allowing another agency, such as the California-American Water Co., to pursue the project.

Transferring the permits to Cal-Am could allow the project to go forward without another vote of the people.

Much of this common ground was in evidence at a standing-room-only forum at Carmel's Carpenter Hall held last Thursday. The event was sponsored by The Carmel Pine Cone, the Carmel Business Association and the Carmel Residents Association.

Parting company

Meanwhile, the two clashed on three major issues:

■ The Hatton Canyon Freeway.

Davi supports the 2.8-mile canyon bypass through the canyon to the east of the existing Highway 1, from the top of the hill near Carmel to the mouth of the valley. Potter opposes the $43 million project.

Davi noted that the identified need for the freeway dates back to the 1950s. Funding lies waiting in the current State Transportation Improvement Program (STIP) budget, although the state deficit in transportation spending is well-recognized.

Davi called the freeway "the only viable alternative" for solving congestion problems, a view he shares with officials from the California Department of Transportation.

"If anyone has a better idea, I am willing to hear it," Davi said. "I certainly don't know of one."

Potter, who represents Monterey on the Transportation Agency for Monterey County, disagrees with Davi's assessment, citing two points:

First, he believes that other projects or, better still, a combination of "operational improvements," should be pursued to ease congestion. A key improvement would be a northbound climbing lane on Highway 1 immediately north of the Carmel Valley Road intersection.

Second, Potter argued that the Hatton Canyon Freeway is, if not dead, no longer "deliverable." This view is based in large part on a recent federal appeals court ruling that calls for more environmental review on the project's impact on wetlands. Legal problems and a seriously divided community stand in the way of the project, Potter said.

■ Measure M.

Davi supports the countywide ballot measure, which would allow the Rancho San Carlos Partnership to proceed with its project — 350 homes, 150 hotel units, an 18-hole golf course and the Santa Lucia Preserve. The preserve would consist of permanent open space on 90 percent of the 32-square-mile ranch.

Although Davi doesn't believe the project is perfect, he said the proposal "adequately mitigates" the affects of additional traffic and water demands. Moreover, the massive preserve, a boon to the public and wildlife, will prevent "piecemeal development" over the 20,000 acres.

Potter urges a no vote on the measure — to overturn a Monterey County Board of Supervisors' 5-0 approval of the project.

"I like (the Rancho San Carlos plan) in concept," Potter said. "It is very well-intentioned. The problem is: The preserve is fractured because the development is 'not clustered.' Development is not just the placement of houses; it is the development of roads and power lines. It is the presence of dogs and cats."

A skeptical Dave Potter (left) looks on as Jeff Davi elaborates on assorted platforms at a debate held in Carmel last week.

Potter said he would also like to see all of the habitat lands dedicated "up-front," rather than in segments with the development of each portion of the ranch.

■ Measure E.

Potter supports this measure, designed to prevent the further encroachment of development onto prime agricultural land.

Potter believes Measure E, while opposed by the big agriculture industry groups, is an idea whose time has come. It reaffirms the Monterey County General Plan and puts necessary checks in place to prevent sprawl and keep the county from "becoming another Silicon Valley or Orange County."

While Davi called the measure "well-intentioned," he is most concerned about the "loss of local control" in land use. He objects to a countywide vote in which "King City and Prunedale can mandate land use in Carmel Valley and Cachaugua."

"If these proposals had been broken down into individual areas, I might have been willing to consider it," Davi said.

remodel or sell their homes."

The Carmel Planning Department has averaged about three inquiries a week from property owners wanting to be apprised of the city's water situation, Tooker said.

Key decision

The allocation — equal to 1 percent of Cal-Am's current production — was made available from recycled water produced by the two-year-old Pebble Beach Reclamation Project.

Silver is expected to decide sometime between mid-November and mid-December if the district can move forward with its allocation, or if a six-month-long environmental review must be undertaken to study the effects of the new allocation.

The judge must decide whether the water board's 4-3 allocation approval was improper because it was done without adding new information and analysis to the district's EIR for allocations.

According to David Laredo, the MPWMD's legal counsel, the judge's injunction was "not unanticipated" and doesn't indicate Silver is siding with opponents of the allocation.

The legal challenge to allocation is being led by Monterey resident Ed Leeper and his Save Our Peninsula committee. Handling the legal work is Carmel Valley attorney Zan Henson.

Opponents hope that additional environmental review will help convince the water board majority that the allocation is ill-advised at a time when Cal-Am is pumping more water than the Carmel River environmental can accommodate.

Although Carmel is completely out of residential water, it has about 6.5 acre-feet remaining for commercial and other uses. At present, the city uses about 834 acre-feet a year.

ments for the purpose of ensuring that excellent and free service are continued at Harrison Memorial Library and Park Branch."

Funds raised are for books, equipment and program support of Harrison Memorial Library not paid for by the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Arriolas stay aboard

In other news involving the library, cartoonist Gus Arriola of "Gordo" fame and his wife, Frances, have again been named honorary chairs for the foundation's annual campaign.

"We look forward to continuing to help the foundation raise funds for Harrison Memorial Library," said Frances. "It's our way to give something back to the community."

Funds raised by the campaign are used to buy new books, periodicals, tapes and equipment and to provide programs each year for children and seniors. The goal this year is $75,000.

Mr. Olson was "very well-liked," according to Sgt. Bruce Palmer, who worked with the deputy in the Monterey substation.

"People loved to be around him. He always walked in with a mischievous look in his eye, like he knew a joke you weren't privy to yet," said Palmer. "I never heard him complain about late detail or uncomfortable calls."

Allard said Mr. Olson exemplified the department's desire to incorporate more of a community-policing stance into its role.

"He epitomized the kind of energetic, creative, service-oriented, community-oriented person that we want," said Allard. "He was one of those people who had the community-oriented ideas that the sheriff has been promoting within our department and working toward for so long."

On his own initiative, Mr. Olson implemented a jet ski patrol on San Antonio Lake. He dug up information on a program called "law loaner," and was able to get a jet ski loaned to the department.

"He was so excited about the jet ski," said Palmer. "He was just proud as punch. He thought it was the greatest thing in the world."

Mr. Olson volunteered to patrol the lake during the summers.

"His patrol helped immensely," said Allard. "It helped us enforce water boating laws and helped with public safety by making sure people were properly using the waterways and facilities."

Allard said Mr. Olson's patrol kept the lake safe for children, swimmers and other boaters.

According to Palmer, a press conference was held at the lake announcing the acquisition of the jet ski and the water patrol program. Shortly after the conference, while people were still milling around, there was a call for a medical emergency across the lake. Mr. Olson responded on the jet ski.

Palmer remembers the day fondly.

"He hopped on his noble steed right away," he recalled. " The call was for a man who had had a heart attack across the lake. He had cut the response time by ... well, a lot!"

"He was just a rare guy," Palmer said as he fought back tears.

SHERIFF'S LOG

FRIDAY, SEPT. 27

Carmel Valley: A woman reported that her house had been entered without permission by a suspect who may have been retrieving property belonging to him. Case continues.

Big Sur: A 16-foot mobile home parked at Pfieffer State Beach was reportedly burglarized.

Carmel: Deputies who received a report of a couple having a domestic problem outside a movie theater found that one of the parties had already left by the time they arrived.

Carmel: An orbital sander and a can of pork and beans — together worth $475 — were reportedly stolen from a rental cottage.

Pebble Beach: An electrical short is believed to be the cause of a fire that occured in the attic of a coed locker room at a local school. The California Department of Forestry put out the blaze, which was reported by Pebble Beach Security.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 28

Big Sur: A man was placed into custody after placing a knife against a woman's throat and threatening to "stick" her. The aggressor also swung the knife at a man who had earlier told him to put it down.

Big Sur: A man reported that his vehicle had been burglarized while parked along Highway 1 near Andrew Molera State Park. Loss was estimated at $700.

Carmel Valley: A woman reported receiving a threat regarding her barking dog.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 29

Carmel Valley: A man reported that his ex-wife was 45 minutes late in dropping off their daughter at his house. The man wanted this violation of the custody agreement documented.

Carmel Valley: A woman reported that the driver of a black pickup truck scared her when he/she drove up behind her vehicle and flashed the high beams at her several times.

Carmel: A man reported that his storage shed had been burglarized and his water meter had been vandalized.

Carmel: An anonymous report of two gunshots led deputies to investigate a white Isuzu sport/utility vehicle that had been left at the end of a street overnight. Nothing suspicious was found.

Carmel Valley: Deputies responding to a woman's report that a prowler was lurking beneath her bedroom window found the guilty party was in fact the woman's cat.

Pebble Beach: A man reported that his $2,000 outboard motor had been stolen from his 23-foot boat moored 100 feet from shore at Stillwater Cove.

City Talk

Carmel mayor on the mend, but won't forget brilliance of area ambulance, fire crews

By KEN WHITE
Mayor, Carmel-by-the-Sea

A FEW weeks ago I had occasion to avail myself of the services offered by a very special group of people — a group many of us may have taken for granted over the years, perhaps without ever realizing how very splendid, caring and competent its members are.

I am speaking specifically of the Carmel Fire Department and Carmel Ambulance, staffed by men and women who are so very dedicated — not only to their profession, but to the residents of our town.

I had taken a fall in the very early hours of the morning and, due to a back problem, had extremely severe pain and was unable to get up. As you might expect, my wife and I were both quite upset by this time. The emergency team, who arrived in only moments, was truly wonderful.

Its members are so well-trained: They took what, for us, was a crisis situation and handled it perfectly. They spoke to us calmly and quietly; they told us exactly what they were going to be doing and why they were going to be doing it; they were well aware that their patient was in extreme pain; and they were most professional in their approach as to how to best transport me to the ambulance and eventually to the Emergency Room at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula.

The ability of these fine professionals to understand the level of discomfort I was experiencing was very clear through their words of assurance and gentle handling. I was put onto a stretcher and carried carefully and slowly through the house.

No bumps in the road

Each step of the way, a member of the crew would inform me as to what was happening and what would happen next. The drive to the hospital was slow and careful, with all efforts made to avoid any bump in the road. The continuing care and concern of our ambulance crew was evident through our arrival at the Emergency Room and was apparent not only to my wife and me, but to the medical staff at the hospital as well.

Since neither I nor anyone in my immediate family never had occasion to use the ambulance service prior to this incident, the whole experience was a true eye opener for us.

My position toward our Carmel-by-the-Sea ambulance service has always been one of appreciation and support. But in the aftermath of this experience, I am emphatic that we must keep our ambulance crew at the Carmel Fire Department under the same organization as we now enjoy.

To all of the very wonderful and kind people who have taken the time to call or visit or send notes of encouragement to me during my hospitalization and recovery, I thank you. The outpouring of concern and good wishes has certainly buoyed my spirits.

My wife, Jean, and I are so appreciative of the many expressions of support and offers of help. It is a enlightening and humbling experience to learn, first-hand, of the depth of goodwill among one's friends and neighbors. We will always remember their many kindnesses.

Ken White is in his third term as mayor of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Prior to Tuesday's Carmel City Council meeting, it was clear that Mayor Ken White was happy to be back on his feet.

COUNCIL: Mayor White returns to break tie on concrete-asphalt debate in favor of the project. The motion passed 3-2, with Councilman Marshall Hydorn and Livingston dissenting.

"How do we know how much asphalt would cost if we never put it out to bid?" Livingston said with a final note of relentless defiance.

Jim Cullem, director of Public Works, told Livingston the city staff already knew the cost because they have paid for asphalt projects in the past.

In defense of Cullem, Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac said, "I think we have to trust the director of Public Works' judgment. This (concrete) is a lot cheaper because it will last four times as long."

Hazdovac also praised concrete for its "durability and safety."

Just before the vote was cast, Livingston made a final statement of disapproval in which she told council and the public that she did not approve of spending an additional $30,000 for concrete.

"I'm really concerned about the fiscal responsibility of the city," she said.

In July, the city estimated the concrete project at $374,00 and the asphalt project at $344,000.

Behind the scenes

In an interview with the Pine Cone, Cullem said he believed the city has made a fiscally sound choice because:

- Concrete lasts longer and requires fewer repairs than asphalt.
- The cost of the two surfaces is about equal when considering their lifecycles.
- Concrete is better equipped to withstand the heavy buses and trucks that travel along Ocean Avenue.
- Automobiles will be able to brake faster and and have less of a chance of skidding on the street if it is paved with concrete.

Carmel has received $226,080 in state funding for road improvements, which may be completed with whatever surfacing the city desires. In May, Public Works spent $27,008 of the grant to repave the intersection of Carpenter and Ocean in asphalt.

Public sentiment

According to one homeowner, that project, completed by Granite Construction, caused a tremendous amount of irritation and some property damage.

"It was like a continuous earthquake," said Mason Carlson, a Carmel resident. "I'm afraid if they (Granite Construction workers) do this with asphalt and a vibrating roller, I'll end up with cracks in my foundation."

Carlson alleged at Tuesday's meeting that the project caused cracking in his walkway. He said he contacted the construction company, has received no reply and will hire a structural engineer to assess the problem.

He also said whatever project is approved should be completed without damage to private property and unreasonable inconvenience to homeowners.

R.C. Allbritton, vice president of Granite Construction, was unavailable for comment.

Council also provided no response to Carlson's concerns, and the meeting continued with comments from the public.

On behalf of the Carmel Residents Association, Mary Condry told council that concrete was a poor choice because of its expense and the noise and bumpy surfaces associated with it.

"I do reiterate the wish that we'd look at getting a bid for asphalt," Condry said.

William Harrington, a Carmel resident, told council he agreed with the choice of concrete and suggested that anyone opting for asphalt should be prepared to spend lots of money on repairs.

"I suggest we cover the street in gold," Harrington said facetiously.

Coastal beach cleanup nets some odd discoveries

By KRISTI BELCAMINO

THE BOOTY was a scavenger's dream.

At the 12th annual California Coastal Cleanup Day on Saturday, Sept. 21, organized by the California Coastal Commission's Adopt-A-Beach Program, some 1,000 Monterey County volunteers combed the coast from Zmudowski Beach near Moss Landing to Garrapata Beach in Big Sur.

The 6,624 pounds of trash and 1,386 pounds of recyclable materials collected included such treasures as a winning Lotto ticket (amount undisclosed), a bar of soap, an unopened beer, a suitcase, an outboard engine, a car-alarm key, golf tees, a shopping cart, two sweaters and a bag of Oreo cookies.

Additional loot included such oddities as an otter skull, a golf cart seat, a muffler, a toilet seat, the front of a TV set, a pair of men's underwear and the bottom half of a woman's bikini.

Some of the hazards removed from the beach included several dead sea lions, a handful of dead birds, dog feces, nails, glass, a firecracker and shotgun shells.

California Park Ranger Dave Rodriguez said there was an unusually large number of empty outboard motor oil cans and plastic water bottles collected, leading him to suspect boaters littering at sea.

"What we're finding is that while we've made a real impact on the folks on land not to throw things on the beach, we have not been as successful with pleasure craft and other boats," said Rodriguez.

ALLAN

the right moment, had the right skills, the right equipment (surfboard and wetsuit) and because I was a fisherman, something caught my eye. The rest was automatic."

Runs in the family

Lifesaving appears to run in the family for the Allans. David's father, Bob, has also received a Plaque of Merit from the Coast Guard for two lifesaving acts while he was a member of the Coast Guard Auxiliary.

Although Allan also was recently recognized by the Carnegie Hero Fund Foundation for his act of bravery, he was especially pleased to be recognized by the Coast Guard.

"It was really a great honor to accept (the award) because they are the professionals out there doing this all the time," he said. "This is a special medal from real pros who know the business of lifesaving.

Lt. Commander Dean Lee of the Monterey Coast Guard described Allan's heroic feats and the perils he and Jamieson faced to guests at Monday's award ceremony.

"In short, Mr. Allan, was in the right place at the right time," Lee said. "Although others had notified the authorities, time was ticking away."

He said without Allan's intervention Jamieson would "likely have perished."

Lee said he has a lot of respect for people who willingly and voluntarily "go in harm's way" to save someone else.

"Too often they go unrecognized and unappreciated — not this time," said Lee. "Not too many people risk their lives to save a stranger. Ordinary people don't do such things. Some people are willing to sacrifice in order that others may live."

Lee called the medal the entry into an elite fraternity of lifesavers.

"It's an exclusive fraternity of those who risk their lives for their country and their fellow man," he said.

The medal was established in 1874, and since then 2,028 silver medals have been bestowed on citizens.

According to Lee, people like Allan are important because the Coast Guard can't always be in the right place at the right time.

"We are but a few and our coast is so large," he said. "It's necessary for citizens to react and if they are able (to help). When they do we sit up and take notice."

Full circle

Allan and Jamieson plan to keep in touch.

"It was kind of like completing the circle," said Allan. "It was a wonderful feeling, almost a reunion, after everything, this was the icing on the cake."

He said his lifesaving act has has a ripple effect.

"A cascade of goodwill has followed," said Allan. "I did this one thing which saved a person's life and so many nice things have happened, almost a chain reaction."

Allan is also happy that something positive is being shared with others.

"We are all so used to all the bad things that go on that we sort of cover up the good things," he said.

Allan said he would not hesitate to do it all over.

"If I'm in that situation again, I'd do it again in a heart beat," said Allan. "When an opportunity is put before you, you take it."

CLEANUP

He sees the irony in the situation.

"That's one thing I cannot fathom: People spend anything from several hundred to several thousand dollars to buy a boat to get out and see this pristine water and yet they throw things over the side."

Overall, the cleanup was successful, said Rodriguez.

He encourages people to continue last Saturday's efforts by joining Adopt-A-Beach (800/COAST-4U for an application).

"It is basically for people who want to take the time, once or twice a year, to grab a trashbag and go clean up their little section of heaven," he said. "To paraphrase a past president, "If not you, then who? If not now, then when? If we don't care, who will?"

Tax rules for home sales get scrutiny from Clinton, Dole

By JAMES P. CALANDRA, CPA

TAXES FEATURE prominently in the presidential candidates' efforts to attract voter attention, and one group of people likeliest to benefit from the bidding war — no matter who wins — is homeowners.

President Clinton proposes to exclude the first $500,000 of home sale profits ($250,000 for single filers) beginning with post-1996 sales. The new exclusion apparently would replace Code Sec. 121's once-in-a-lifetime exclusion of up to $125,000 of home-sale profits for sellers age 55 or older, and Code Sec. 1034, which defers tax on a home sale profit if the adjusted sales proceeds are timely reinvested in another home.

The new exclusion would be reusable every two years.

Republican challenger Bob Dole has proposed to exclude up to $250,000 of gain ($125,000 for single filers) if the home is used as a residence for three of the five years preceding the sale. The exclusion would be smaller for shorter holding periods, and larger for longer holding periods of up to 10 years.

Hold off on selling?

Counting on election-year tax promises is inherently speculative, of course, and there's no guarantee that any dramatically enhanced home-sale exclusion would be available for all '97 sales.

Nonetheless, taxpayers who have listed their homes for sale may be wondering whether they should put their selling plans on hold until next year. Here are the key factors to consider:

■ Although legislative proposals for an expanded exclusion are a long way from being drafted, it seems likely that any repeal of Code Sec. 1034 would grandfather sales before the effective date of the repeal. That is, providing the taxpayer timely reinvested the adjusted sales proceeds in another home.

As a result, those who sell a principal residence before year end, and then replace it under current law rules by buying a principal residence that costs at least as much as the one that was sold, probably would escape a current tax on their realized gain.

The untaxed profit would result in a lower basis in the new home, and ultimately could benefit from either of the proposed exclusions.

■ There is little reason to hold off if the home-seller is age 55 or older, and all (or virtually all) of the potential profit will be sheltered by the current exclusion of up to $125,000. If the candidates' new exclusions can be used more than once, there is little reason to suppose that prior use of Code Sec. 121 would bar a taxpayer from taking advantage of a new exclusion on a future sale.

■ Taxpayers who are younger than 55, own residences with large potential gains, and won't be replacing with other residences (or will be replacing with less expensive homes), would benefit if a sale takes place next year instead of this year, and the taxpayer qualifies for any available expanded exclusion.

■ Neither Clinton's nor Dole's proposal offers relief for people who sell their homes at a loss. Home sale losses under current law aren't deductible and the proposals, as they currently stand, do not change this rule.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Carolyn Dolan was a dental hygienist when she took a second job with a telephone answering service. Then she set up her own service in her tiny New York apartment. She once had 300 clients and five employees. In recent years, with 50 clients, she ran the service herself, 24 hours a day, every day. Her groceries were delivered. Her hair stylist made house calls. Finally, at 75, she retired. Said one client: "She can't be replaced. It's like your mother leaving. She's fiercely loyal to you...always there, even holidays." Said Ms. Dolan: "I want a little freedom so that I can walk out, go to the grocery store."

SEA HUNT

Cousteau, Davis to team up for lecture Wednesday in Monterey

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

JEAN-MICHEL Cousteau — diver, environmentalist and son of ocean pioneer Jacques Cousteau — will lecture with Pacific Grove underwater cinematographer Chuck Davis on the challenges and fascination of filming under the sea at a "Focus on Film" lecture on Wednesday in Monterey.

The presentation, a fund raiser for the nonprofit Monterey County Film Commission, will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Steinbeck Forum in the Monterey Conference Center.

Cousteau has worked as a producer on nearly 60 television documentaries, including the Peabody and Emmy Award-winning "Cousteau Amazon" and the 39-part "Cousteau's Rediscovery of the World" series.

Davis, who has filmed underwater scenes for network documentaries, theatrical movies, and television commercials, has been on expeditions for the Cousteau Society aboard the vessels Alcyone and Calypso.

Cousteau and Davis will explain and illustrate with film clips their worldwide adventures and creative methods of capturing underwater visions. A portion of the presentation will be open for audience questions.

Tickets, priced at $15, are available through the Monterey County Film Commission, Bay Books in Monterey and The Bookmark in Pacific Grove. Student and "Friends of the Film Commission" tickets are $12. A coffee reception is included.

Drive-through flu shot clinic set for Tuesday

By KRISTI BELCAMINO

WARDING OFF those nasty little flu bugs is as easy as rolling down your car window and rolling up your shirt sleeve.

And for those over 65, it just may save their life.

Since flu and pneumonia — a common complication of the flu — kill nearly 76,000 Americans each year, The American Lung Association and local health care clinics want to make getting a flu shot as easy and convenient as possible.

A Monterey drive-through flu shot clinic will be set up from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday in the lower parking lot behind Mervyns in the Del Monte Shopping Center.

The clinic is a collaboration of the American Lung Association and local health care clinics.

According to Dr. Steven Slack, president of the American Lung Association of the Central Coast, people over 65 and those with a chronic illness are advised to get a flu shot since they are at a higher risk of developing serious disease complications from the flu.

Who's at risk

Those considered at high risk are anyone with chronic lung disease; chronic kidney disease, diabetes or other chronic metabolic disorders; severe anemia or anyone who has a disease or is undergoing treatment that depresses their immune system.

Flu and pneumonia combined are the fifth-leading cause of death among all Americans over 65.

In addition, Karen Fulton, executive director of the American Lung Association of the Central Coast, said it is also a good idea for children and anyone who works in the health care industry or with children or seniors to get a flu shot, since flu is an airborne virus.

The drive-through clinic costs $8 and receipts are available for people who would like to bill Medicare or their health insurance.

Fulton said the wait for one of the three drive-through lines can be as little as none and as long as five to 10 minutes.

"We try to keep them moving really fast," she said.

After the shot, motorists are directed to wait in a holding area for five minutes, where Monterey County Public Health Department workers and emergency personnel are stationed to watch for adverse reactions.

The American Lung Association recommends getting a flu shot in mid-October through mid-November, before the peak of flu season. However, the assocaition recommends people allergic to eggs avoid a flu shot since they have had adverse reactions in the past.

In addition, the Visiting Nurse Association is offering low-cost flu shots around the Peninsula. Shots are $7.50 or for those with Medicare; VNA will handle billing.

Where, when to get flu shots

FLU SHOTS, in addition to Tuesday's drive-through clinic at Mervyn's, are available at the dates and locations listed below. (Clinics are 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., unless otherwise noted.)

Pirates, Padres brace for MTAL football openers

■ RLS: Backup QB Brant keys win over Harbor; will guide team into Friday's game at King City.

By ABRAM TROSKY
Pine Cone Sports Correspondent

ROBERT LOUIS Stevenson is confident about its varsity football Mission Trail Athletic League opener Friday night at King City High against the Mustangs despite the absence of starting quarterback Julio Carta.

Carta, a senior, tore cartilage in his knee in practice last Tuesday and underwent surgery shortly thereafter. Not only do the Pirates lose their signal caller, but he also was a starting safety on defense and No. 1 punter.

With Carta on the sidelines last Saturday, junior backup Tommy Brant stepped up to fill the void nicely as he led the Pirates to a 17-7 victory over visiting Harbor in a non-league matchup.

"He had some mighty big shoes to fill," said coach Jeff Young. "Julio is not only the quarterback but a captain and a leader. It was so inspiring for all of us to see Tommy step up to the challenge."

Stocker paying dividends

Senior tight end Peter Stocker caught nine of Brant's 10 completions of the day. Stocker was not only a standout on offense — he scored both Pirate touchdowns — but he also recorded 12 tackles on defense as well as making an interception.

Senior kicker Brian Carmichael capped off the scoring with a 27-yard field goal late in the second half to give RLS the 10-point win over its Santa Cruz Coast Athletic League opponent. Earlier in the season, Harbor had pinned a 37-14 loss on Carmel, the Pirates' cross-town rival from the MTAL.

Stevenson's defense was relentless all day, giving up only one score on a 20-yard run by Harbor's Cody Muhly. In all, it tallied five sacks and three interceptions.

"We beat a good football team," said Young. "Well-coached, talented, strong and physical — they're not too unlike King City."

The Mustangs, 2-1 in non-league play, sport a large line similar to that of Santa Cruz High, which defeated RLS in the season's first week. Young cited King City's tenacious defense, capable backs and well-balanced veer offense as strong points they will prepare for.

In last year's contest, RLS drubbed the Mustangs 29-8. The varsity kickoff in King City is set for 8 p.m.

■ Pirate Sports Scene: Due to space constraints, Lisa Kroopf's coverage of other RLS sports news will be held over until next week.

■ Carmel: With Armbrust gone for year, it'll be backfield by committee as Alisal visits Saturday.

By SCOTT A. BROWN

IN CULTIVATING a winning attitude, Carmel High School's varsity football team faces an "Is your glass half empty or half full?" dilemma entering Mission Trail Athletic League play Saturday against visiting Alisal.

Last season, the Padres finished their preseason without their two star players. Quarterback Golden Anderson had partially torn his anterior cruciate ligament (ACL), an injury that would ultimately sideline him for the entire season. Ironically, it was during the Padres' 44-27 loss to Alisal last year in the second week of league play that Anderson completely tore the ligament.

So, too, was running back Ben Armbrust injured for most of the year with a broken collarbone.

This year, Anderson is healthy. He led the Padres (1-2) to their first victory Sept. 20, throwing for 168 yards and two touchdowns in a win against Santa Cruz.

He has been remarkably mobile considering his injury, and has gained the confidence of his offensive line, which consists of Frankie Ringer, Josh Bailey, Brandon Schumacher, Matt Wall, Kris Pallastrini and Golden Ables.

Any coach will agree, however, that to pass effectively one must first establish the run. Sadly, the talented Armbrust will more than likely miss his senior season due to a torn ACL he suffered in Carmel's loss to Harbor during the second week of the season.

He will be replaced by a committee made up of Nachi Cardenas, R.J. Whitfill, Ben Rianda and Tony Cain. Rianda was especially effective against Santa Cruz, gaining 82 yards on 10 carries.

Taking advantage of bye

Carmel head coach Mike Kelly used the Padres' recent bye week to reconstruct their offensive set.

"We've had to change our offense because of Ben's injury," said Kelly. "Now we have to go with a one-back offense."

"I'm optimistic about league, though," Kelly continued. "We have our quarterback, and he's healthy at the moment. Our offensive line is playing well together; working hard together. They take pride in opening holes for the runners."

Kelly also acknowledged several defen-

MPC coach hopes to sing winning note

■ Lobos: Injury bug bites hard at quarterback; Mims recruits shortstop as new signal caller.

By SCOTT A. BROWN

RON MIMS' Tuesday could have qualified as material for a country music ballad.

Before noon, the first-year Monterey Peninsula College head football coach had checked on the progress of the first two quarterbacks on his depth chart, Jason Petrovsky and Jason Nash, who both had knee surgery within two hours of one another.

He had spoken with the team doctor about his third-string quarterback, Andrew Woods, who has a stretched medial ligament in his right knee and a severely sprained right ankle.

Finally, he began his conversation with Dedrick Colbert, the starting shortstop on the MPC baseball team, a little like this: "Son, how'd you like to run my offense."

One could only hope he wouldn't arrive home to find his wife had left him and his dog had run away.

MPC's offense played like an untuned six-string in their first two games against Marin City College and Kings River College.

"Our offense was slow to execute," said Mims. "We couldn't sustain our drives. As a result, our defense was on the field for an average of 90 snaps a game, which is about 30 more than it should be."

Against City College of San Francisco, however, the Lobos offense started jamming as one. Freshman Tovar Wilson of Miami Beach High (Fla.) ran for 178 yards on 41 carries. Receiver Jimmy Martin had three receptions for 117 yards, including a 61-yard bomb from Woods that tied the game at 14-14 late in the fourth quarter.

The Lobos netted more than 400 yards of total offense. As a result, the defense was on the field for only 61 snaps.

Yet when all was said and done, the Lobos, 0-3, ended up with a heartbreaking, 20-14 double-overtime loss due to a failed quarterback sneak and two missed field goals.

"That was absolutely a tough loss," said Mims. "I'm hurt for our guys. They played to the level that we as coaches expected. We made lots of adjustments during practice last week. You don't usually get players to respond as quickly as ours did. We dominated, in fact, every aspect of the game."

Coming into their game Saturday against a 2-1 Shasta Community College team, Mims must manage a discouraged and leaderless band. Pretrovsky is more than likely out

CHS tennis team gets 1st win; Zerbe, Pfeiffer pace harriers

By TREVOR FOGG and PATRICK FOUDY
Pine Cone Sports Correspondents

CARMEL HIGH School's girls tennis team recorded its first victory of the season last week with a 4-3 league win over Alvarez.

The Padres' three doubles teams — Allison Downing and Andrea Magee; Jenny Ferguson and Piper Frode; and Lindsey Johnson and Kathy Kim — all won their matches.

The fourth victory was picked up by freshman singles player Tiffany Thompson.

"I'm really excited," said coach Dave Chaney. "It feels great to get that first win under your belt and all of the girls are getting a chance to play good tennis."

The Padres then lost 4-3 to Alisal Thursday. Thompson, along with the doubles team of Downing and Magee, scored victories again. The other win was tallied by Misty Schuh.

The girls will be on the road for their next four matches, including playing at Gonzales today.

■ CROSS COUNTRY

The CHS varsity boys' cross country team claimed fifth place overall at the Mission Trail Athletic League Center Meet at Toro Park last Thursday.

Experienced senior captains Lindley Zerbe and John Pfeiffer were the first two Padre runners across the finish line.

The girls' varsity team, which runs without a senior on the roster, finished in seventh place. Junior captain Molly Allen was the team's top finisher, while freshman Vanessa

It's finally here — Fine Arts 5K off and running Sunday

IF YOU ARE reading this, then the editor has permitted me to digress from the subject of fitness. If you read on, I can assume that you allowed the same digression.

I want to tell you about something you observe almost daily but probably know very little about: fund-raising events for non-profit agencies and charities. That sounds like a dull subject, but it's really quite interesting.

The Almost Tolerable Fitness Column

By Bill Burleigh

There are lots and lots of agencies that need money, but get nothing from government. They cannot rely on taxes. Good examples are the Big Sur Volunteer Fire Brigade and the Big Sur Health Center. They struggled for years with the proceeds from bake sales, Halloween parties and merchant generosity.

Sixteen years ago, a bunch of us in Big Sur got together and staged a 10K foot race in Pfeiffer State Park to benefit the two agencies. Since then we have raised more than $300,000, primarily due to the donations from Nepenthe restaurant and other Big Sur merchants.

Almost all fund raisers depend upon private businesses for their success. They are called sponsors, and without them we would either have to have higher taxes, or we could not enjoy the benefits of the agency. No charity can operate without money.

Events, such as foot races, provide a happy meeting place for non-profit agencies and businesses that want to help. Many companies want to contribute to their communities; we give them the opportunity. We are the catalyst, so to speak.

GET THIS! They're runnin' over 3 miles to "preserve open space". That means we'll always have a place to crash. To show my gratitude, when I'm financially stable, I'm gonna buy some of them stocks from M.L. Stern and a 'pad' from Contempo Realty.
THE PINE CONE

HUNGRY ACTORS UNMOTIVATED HELP... BLESS YOU

ILLUSTRATION/SHELL FISHER

In the case of the Sunday's Carmel Fine Arts 5K Run and Walk, we are trying to raise money to preserve open space. We all want to save open space, so long as they don't raise our taxes, and so long as government doesn't take away our property to preserve it. We want to provide compensation to willing sellers.

The entry fee that the runners and walkers pay just about covers our expenses: insurance, signs and banners, professional scoring, T-shirts, food, etc. We rely upon sponsors for our "profit," our contribution to open space.

Frank Wasko, vice-president of M.L. Stern & Co. Inc., is chairman of the Carmel Open Space Task Force, the race's beneficiary. He met with his boss, Milford (Mickey) L. Stern. As a result, the firm donated $5,000 to the Fine Arts 5K race, now in its second year. If all goes as planned, we expect that the entire contribution will go into the Task Force fund for preservation of open space. That's nice.

Contempo Realty, with an office on Junipero Street near Devendorf Park in downtown Carmel, is our next largest sponsor with a cash donation of $3,000. They even gave us an advance donation of $1,000 to cover early expenses, such as insurance. Hopefully these funds will go, eventually, for open space.

There is still time to register ($27) for the race and the fabulous white tablecloth Champagne Beach Brunch that follows at 10 a.m. Sunday.

You can even register Saturday. Simply go to Vista Lobos Park, located at Torres and Third in Carmel, and fill out an entry form. This is also where previous registrants can pick up their bib numbers without having to join the crowd on Sunday.

And between 7 and 8:30 a.m. Sunday — race day — you can still secure your spot by coming to our registration station at the foot of Ocean Avenue.

The starting gun goes off at 9 a.m.

I have three things to ask of you:

- Remain vertical for the entire 3.1 miles, whether you run or walk;
- If you signed up because of this column, let me know at the finish area;
- Have fun!

Next week in The Pine Cone, we'll have another fitness column, plus your name (if you competed and finished!) as we offer complete Fine Arts 5K race results, and then a final wrapup column Oct. 17.

Until next Thursday, Happy Feet, and think about our sponsors!

Caltrans is the culprit

Dear Editor:

Your Sept. 19 front-page article, "Freeway not dead so long as Caltrans believes in it," has reinforced my opinion that the biggest impediment to Highway 1 improvements is not the no-growth environmentalists, but Caltrans itself.

Caltrans has been working on this matter for more than 40 years, and what do they have to show for it? A handful of minor interim improvements, an inadequate Environmental Impact Report, and a bitterly divided community.

After decades of promoting the Hatton Canyon Freeway, they have yet to get clear support from the citizens they are supposed to be serving and they have yet to secure even one of the many permits necessary for its construction.

Despite this lack of real progress, Caltrans officials stubbornly cling to the notion that their freeway can be built someday. But it will be years, decades maybe, before they will be able to get through the litigation and permit applications, and there is a high probability that they will not be able to overcome these hurdles.

Considering Caltrans' latest defeat, it is time for this agency to face reality. The important question now is not whether the freeway is the best traffic solution, but what project is politically and legally achievable?

Many workable alternative projects have been proposed. Most of them would have negligible effects on wildlife habitat, wetlands and natural land forms, so construction permits could be acquired quickly and easily. Costly and time consuming litigation would be less likely to delay them. Moreover, their construction time would be much shorter.

The fact is, any one of the alternatives that have been put forth would do more to relieve traffic congestion than an unbuilt, and probably unbuildable, freeway.

Caltrans needs to accept this and learn to compromise. Their all-or-nothing mentality is getting us nowhere.

A welcome retreat

Dear Editor:

I recently took a walk in the Lester Rowntree Arboretum above Flanders Mansion in Carmel and was surprised to see uneven paths, stones missing and an appearance of plain neglect.

After calling the city, I felt somewhat relieved — a new irrigation system is being put in place, one which help maintain the many bushes, flowers and trees in that lovely spot. (Though many are drought-tolerant).

Seeing the Arboretum in its present state has made me reflect upon our tendency (mine, at least) to take for granted the natural treasures around us. I'm grateful to all those unnamed volunteers who have tended the garden there, creating a beautiful and peaceful spot, a haven for birds and small wildlife as well as a "retreat" from the street crowds and busy traffic.

It's been a welcome haven for me when I worked in Carmel and needed to go somewhere and "recharge my batteries," so to speak.

As I never saw any workers there during my brief sojourns, I'd like to thank the Arboretum's keepers, both past and present.

Judy Karas, Monterey

Destruction of political signs

Dear Editor:

I am dismayed at the tactics of certain groups who feel they must control all messages and deface property in doing so.

Certain opponents of Measure M (Rancho San Carlos project) have started such a campaign of sign destruction — visible on Carmel Valley Road, and all over Seaside and Salinas.

They have torn down the "Yes on M" signs on private property and defaced the "Yes on M" signs along roadways by spray painting, obscuring the signs and effectively silencing their opponents message.

If these people are comfortable that they have a message with some merit, they should spend their energy delivering that message instead of destroying the other side's (and the public's) materials.

Once a sign or pamphlet is posted, be it in a yard or on a roadside, it is the public's right to view it. If you do not agree with the position being displayed, you may vote against it. That is our process.

The result of this blatant disregard for the public's democratic process and malicious destruction of private property is a very negative image for the opposition to Measure M and, frankly, also seems quite desperate.

Henne Belford, Carmel

A mission to serve all

Dear Editor:

One of the foremost considerations a candidate for county supervisor must make is not to his political affiliations but to his desire to serve all of the people residing in his district.

This should not be a political plum but a chance to prove that the candidate can work for and with his constituency.

I am convinced that Jeff Davi can do this job far better than his opposition. I hope the readers will agree.

Roger D. Williams, Sr., Carmel Valley

Standing tall

Dear Editor:

David Potter is a pro-active citizen who takes stands on principle and has worked over the last several years to keep the City of Monterey and the Monterey Peninsula places of human and livable scale.

Potter is the councilman who took a public stand against the dam. Potter supports the POWR referendum, which will ensure that current peninsula water needs are met before new hookups for development are granted.

Potter is against Measure M arguing that this housing development needs to be reworked so that Rancho San Carlos is a true clustered development instead of polka-dotted all over the hills.

Potter has stood up against Caltrans and opposed the Hatton Canyon freeway, supporting instead the more rational improvements to Highway 1. Potter endorses Measure E, which ensures that our general plan continues to protect farmlands and open space and thereby stops urban sprawl.

Monterey County desperately needs a supervisor who will stand up against unbridled growth. That person is David Potter.

Constance S. Wright, Carmel

Measure E flawed

Dear Editor:

If the proponents of Measure E carefully studied how the initiative will effect the environment of Monterey County they would all be opposed to such a measure.

Unfortunately, because the measure claims it will protect all agricultural land from development for the next 28 years, people are giving their support. Citizens are supporting the measure without any concern of the loopholes that exist in the language of the initiative.

If Measure E is passed in November, the initiative will bypass environmental review (CEQA) by amending the county's general plan without public input, without public review and without any regard to the consequences of its provisions.

In addition to bypassing the environmental review (CEQA) process, Measure E presumes that local citizens did a poor job in drafting the general plan. This stringent land-use tool was subjected to exhaustive and thorough environmental review, and was tailored to meet the needs and address the concerns of our community and was adopted after hundreds of hours of local citizen input.

The general plan provides for an orderly process to reject bad proposals and make good ones better.

Furthermore, Measure E is so poorly written it expresses concerns about water availability, air quality and traffic, yet it doesn't solve any of those problems.

Measure E sounds good, and it looks good, yet we cannot base our decision on its cover. Vote no on Measure E.

Frances F. Pabrua, Salinas

No on Measure M

Dear Editor:

What makes Rancho San Carlos so special?

Monterey County has hundreds of ranches, all diverse, unique and beautiful in their own way. Each of these ranches have a large percent of unbuildable terrain just like RSC.

Monterey County granted a 400 percent density increase plus heavy and light commercial zoning for hotels, a shopping center, golf course and other commercial uses just because the developer agreed to dedi-

Planning commission chairman responds to Tescher commentary

By CARL LIVINGSTON, JR.

IT IS MY duty to respond to local builder, Chris Tescher, and his cutting remarks (Pine Cone commentary, Sept. 26) about bringing in a consultant to update the city's R-1 ordinances and guidelines.

Chris is a nice guy, but Hugh Comstock he ain't. Yes, he has built some quality homes here in Carmel and he has often held his height limit one or two feet under the allowable maximum. But when he complains about planning staff's objectivity . . . well, he is a builder and he has his own objectivity.

Carmel's R-1 guidelines and ordinances definitely need updating, and I think Chris agrees; and, yes there are a number of ways of getting the job done. You can bring in an outside expert (call him a consultant, if you will); detach one of our city planners for six months and bring in a temporary replacement; form a local committee; or, let some organization run amok with the project.

It is up to our elected officials as to how they wish to proceed. But, whoever is given the task, the city will be better off with ordinances and guidelines that are more suited to today's conditions. Perhaps every home will not have a garage on the street, and more one-story homes will appear even if they take up more ground coverage.

All-volunteer group

And yes, I do take umbrage with Chris Tescher's blanket criticism of the planning commission and staff desiring to get outside help on this very technical project. The commissioners are all volunteers who spend many hours a month hearing public comment, including neighbors complaining about neighbors.

It isn't easy to rule fairly. Better guidelines will definitely help.

But, let's not get too depressed, things are not too desperate as they now operate. One thing for sure — Carmel residents will continue to keep an eye on local builders. They're not bad guys, it's just, well you know, our objectivity differs from theirs.

Carl Livingston, Jr., is the chairman of the Carmel Planning Commission. He has lived in Carmel for six and one half years and is a third-generation Californian.

cate his 90 percent junk land to a "preserve."

This is the oldest trick in the country, but the developers got away with it.

Remember, 350 large estates with their roads, fences and guest houses will be placed on the buildable terrain throughout the entire preserve. Bah! Why not allow the rest of the ranch owners in this county who are having hard times to do the same?

Something is wrong here, and the voters of Monterey County can smell it. That is why more than 12,000 of them signed the initiative to place the supervisors' decision on the ballot.

A strong message is being sent to the supervisors that enough is enough. Let's take care of the problems we already have (traffic, water, etc.) and no more special treatment for megadollar developers who won't even keep the profits in our county.

Vote no on Measure M.

POWR to the people

Dear Editor:

On behalf of the POWR (Protect Our Water Resources) committee, I wish to thank the hundreds of generous people who gave so many hours of their summer to make our initiative drive a success.

We also thank the following organizations for their early support: Carmel Residents Association, Pacific Grove Residents Association, League of Women Voters Monterey Peninsula and the Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club. Their endorsement was crucial to our effort in the Peninsula community.

It was an arduous exercise but immensely rewarding in the overwhelming response of the citizenry, whose interest and enthusiasm revealed an awareness of our water problem and a widespread concern for its solution.

We urge attendance at the water district's board meeting on Monday, Oct. 21. We shall ask the board to adopt this initiative as an ordinance in order to obviate the expense of a special election.

In the event the board opts for the latter, we will look forward to commensurate community support for a favorable ballot outcome.

Janice O'Brien, Co-Chair
POWR Committee

Aware of the problems

Dear Editor:

The election of Dave Potter to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors is crucial. Dave is aware of past actions of the supervisors that have adversely affected the cities of Monterey, Pacific Grove, Carmel and the unincorporated areas around those cities.

When the state legislature took over monies previously available to counties, Monterey County immediately began charging cities for booking prisoners, thereby looting cities' general funds. The supervisors also instituted an "administrative" charge to process property tax collections in the cities, thereby further looting the cities' general funds.

When the supervisors broke their contract with the cities of Monterey, Carmel and Pacific Grove which paid, in small part, for library service to residents of Pebble Beach and the other unincorporated areas in the Fifth District, they expected these cities to continue to subsidize Monterey County Free Libraries to an even greater extent.

Since we have only one vote on the board of supervisors, it is important to elect a supervisor with an awareness of the problems of cities as well as the county. Dave Potter — a thoughtful and articulate member of the Monterey City Council — has a demonstrated history of seeing the big picture and a demonstrated ability to work with and persuade others.

Harold G. Ragan, Monterey

Candidate for the freeway

Dear Editor:

If the 4,800 commuters who are hampered every day in the stop-and-go traffic on Highway 1 when they drive from Carpenter Street to the Carmel Valley Road and beyond want to fix it, the Nov. 5 election is their last chance.

Monterey had the same problem when commuters went through town. Luckily, there was an uninhabited stretch of land along the city's eastern edge to build a four-lane divided highway.

Part and parcel of the need to move cars en route to Carmel, the Valley and the Highlands was an extension through Hatton Canyon.

Instead, that project has been delayed. Delayed 40 years. The empty Hatton Canyon was purchased in 1956, and a freeway agreement signed by the State and Monterey County on May 6, 1957.

Congestion increased yearly, and now monthly as the four lanes of traffic from Monterey merge through two lanes on Highway 1.

Dave Potter is running for County Supervisor, District 5, and if elected he will follow the line of his mentor Supervisor Sam Karas, to kill the Hatton Canyon project . . . the only chance for free-flowing traffic.

Jeff Davi is our last chance to stop the undercutting by our county representative to delay construction of the much needed solution in the canyon.

Voters can fix it Nov. 5.

Lois Starnes, Carmel

Lost, not yet found

Dear Editor:

On Sunday morning, I left three books, of value to me, in the courtyard at Norton Court complex, Fifth and Dolores streets. I had left them there inadvertently for an hour or so while responding to a phone call in our apartment upstairs. It was quite careless of me, but I was disturbed by the phone call, which was regarding a very ill sister of mine on the East Coast.

These books were destined to go to my Robert Frost collection in San Francisco's new Main Library and to another Frost collection I have begun in a private school in Ojai.

I hope, if found by someone locally, or wherever, that they might be returned. They are valuable books for the collections I mention, and will bring enjoyment to many readers and scholars.

A suitable reward is forthcoming to the returnee of these books.

Church is growing

Dear Editor:

This letter is in response to the letter written by Pierre Delfausse (Pine Cone, Sept. 19), who is one of 100 or so people who have supposedly left Carmel Presbyterian Church in the last five years.

Even though 100 may have left, every Thursday morning from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. there are more than 100 women meeting weekly to study the Bible together, most of whom were not even in church much less studying the Bible five years ago.

That people move from one church to another is not important. It is not an issue if they are in church "A" or in church "B." What IS important is that they are 'in church." Pastor Jon Wilson is not interested in taking sheep from other churches. He is interested in carrying out the great commission of bringing people into a relationship with Jesus Christ who have never been in church and have never studied the Bible.

It's significant that there are approximately 100 kids in the church's high school program, another 100 kids in middle high school programs, and Sunday School is bursting at the seams.

Why criticize a church that is growing by drawing new people into the kingdom who haven't been in the church before? Instead, praise God!

for the season with a torn anterior ligament. Nash has a torn or strained medial meniscus that will take three or four weeks to heal. Mims will not know until Wednesday if Nash can play or not.

Colbert at the helm

"We've gone to the waiver wire," said Mims. "This young man (Colbert) played quarterback at his high school last year in Maryland in an option offense.

"He came to me the day classes started and told me he wanted to quarterback, but I didn't want to take him back to point A and we were done with two-a days (summer practices). So I asked him to play defense and instead he played winter baseball."

Compounding Mims' problem is that he feels he gave the ball to his running backs, particularly Wilson, too often.

"We have tremendous confidence in running the football," said Mims. "But 41 carries is too many. We should try to keep it under 25."

The Lobos' game against Shasta represents their longest road trip of the year. They leave on a bus at noon Friday and will arrive in Redding seven hours later. Their game begins at 1 p.m. Saturday.

sive standouts: End Josh Bailey has amassed eight sacks in three games, linebacker Tony Cain leads the team in tackles and cornerback Jacob Saxton has picked off four passes in three games.

"Our offense has been much more effective this year. And that really helps our defense. It keeps them off the field so they have to take fewer snaps," Kelly said.

The coach emphasized that the Padres need to improve their kicking and special teams.

"We need to keep teams inside their 20- or 25-yard line to start their drive," Kelly said. "Then, instead of going 60 yards, they have to go 75 or 80. That's two or three extra plays, and in high school, teams could self-destruct with a penalty or a turnover during that time.

"Not too many high school teams can drive 80 yards."

Next up: Alisal High

Alisal, which, like Carmel, finished 2-8 overall and 1-5 in the MTAL a year ago, starts three backs — Jason Annis, R.C. Koller, and Alfonso Nava — in a wing-T set. Annis gained 500 yards in six league games last year as a sophomore.

"All three of those guys are very, very good," said Kelly. "They've got fight, effort and heart. All three are feature type backs."

Alisal lost to Berkeley High 40-15 and Salinas 20-0, before coming up with first victory — a 12-9 verdict at Seaside High last Friday. Koller ran for 103 yards, while Annis totaled 59 and Nava got 57.

Saturday's MTAL varsity opener on Bardarson Field at the CHS campus begins at 2 p.m. The frosh-soph game kicks off the day at 11:45 a.m.

■ WATER POLO

It was a clean sweep for Carmel last Wednesday during the first league matchup of the season. Gilroy was the victim, losing to the Carmel girls team, as well as to the junior varsity and varsity boys' teams.

The girls won their inaugural game, 12-8. Sophomore Kersten Wehde netted five goals, while Traci Davis and Danielle Latta scored twice. Alyse LeValley, Rishna Gracie and Monica Callinan had one goal apiece.

"It was a great way to start our season off," said Wehde.

The varsity boys dominated throughout their 17-3 win. Trevor Fogg could not be stopped, amassing eight goals. Russell Wolter scored four times, while Sasha Vorobiov had three goals. Keith Moon and Cody Reese contributed the last two goals.

The varsity boys also competed in the Monterey Bay Tournament last weekend, winning two of five games and running their overall record to 5-6. Carmel defeated Stevenson 13-5, and topped Salinas 7-5.

Fogg led the scoring assault again with 13 goals for the weekend. Hank Stoffers had five goals. Chase Mahoney was strong in goals and racked up a total of 46 saves.

All three teams will play again next Tuesday at 3 p.m. in the North Salinas High pool. The girls also will compete in the Watsonville Invitational this weekend.

— P.F.

■ GIRLS VOLLEYBALL

The Padres fought through a tough week of league play, dropping matches to Gonzales and King City.

Christina Gaudoin and Lia Chaney continued their impressive hitting in the Padres' 15-13, 15-8, 13-15, 15-8 loss to Gonzales.

Carmel had a more formidable showing against league favorite King City, but was still saddled with a 15-8, 15-10, 15-13 defeat. The accurate hitting of Marlo Milligan, along with dazzling defensive play by Christy Harper and Sierra Shepherd, aided the team effort.

Go ahead, eat! It's the Jewish Food Festival

PHOTOGRAPHS/MARTHA CASANAVE

Pauline Thomas prepares healing chicken soup: "Jewish penicillin."

HUNGRY for pastrami sandwiches, blintzes, knishes and that all-purpose "Jewish penicillin," matzoh ball soup? Satisfy these desires at Congregation Beth Israel's Ninth Annual Jewish Food Festival. The feast returns 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Sunday at the synagogue, located at 5716 Carmel Valley Road in Carmel Valley.

The festival site will be decorated to resemble a village market day. Traditional klezmer music will fill the air, and there will be costumed food vendors, wandering storytellers and pushcart peddlers.

Visitors will enjoy traditional European foods as well as dishes that emerged from the immigrant experience in America: rugalach, egg creams, kugel, mandelbrot and more. Picnic seating will be available, and many foods will be packaged for take-out.

The festival will also feature a children's play area, Israeli dancing, tours of the synagogue and a crafts fair.

Admission is $3, $1 for teenagers, children and seniors 65 and over. All proceeds benefit Congregation Beth Israel's programs and charities.

Visitors are advised to park at Carmel Middle School and take the frequent shuttles to the festival site. After noon, parking will be available at the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula, on Carmel Valley Road across from Rancho Cañada.

Babatunde Olatunji taps into human essence

By KENDALL KLYM

FOR MORE than 30 years, Babatunde Olatunji has dedicated his life to tapping into the souls of humankind.

Through the art of percussion — the technique of tapping the surface of a body to comprehend what lies beneath — Olatunji has exposed what he considers the human joys that transcend all cultures.

WHAT: Babatunde Olatunji and his Drums of Passion ensemble
WHEN: 8 p.m. Saturday
WHERE: Sunset Theater, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel
COST: $12.50 and $16
INFO/RESERVATIONS: 624-3996

A world-reknowned drummer/philosopher from Nigeria, Olatunji will return to the Peninsula with his eight-piece Drums of Passion ensemble for a concert at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Sunset Theater in Carmel. He will open the 1996-97 Performance Carmel series with healing rhythms, songs of celebration, chants and invocations that have moved spectators from across the world to sway back and forth, clap their hands and become one with each other, the Earth and its source.

Source of inspiration

A believer in an African concept that the Creator, the Phenomena, Mother Earth and man and woman exist in a harmonious relationship, Olatunji considers the Monterey Peninsula a place where these elements come together.

"The Monterey Peninsula has influenced me in my writing, my music, feelings toward people around me," Olatunji said from New York during a telephone interview. "Big Sur is a place that looks and feels magical. There's something sacred about it."

Olatunji said whenever he is in Big Sur, he is reminded of the Nigerian fishing village where he grew up.

"It reminds me of my father who was one of the greatest fisherman in our village," he said. "He always caught more than enough to feed the village and sell."

Drawing parallels between music and spirituality, Olatunji said people in communities such as Big Sur and his African village have developed a unifying rhythm with the land and its creator. Those who are out of sync with the environment, he said, destroy it.

"Now we take up all the fish — want it all at one time," Olatunji said.

In his song, "NeNe", an invocation to the Earth, Olatunji cries out to Mother Earth to accept human prayers in a world that is increasingly more troubled — plagued with pain and suffering.

"Nene Eyi uya, Nene Eyi uya (Mother Earth, what a shame)," Olatunji and his ensemble sing while tapping a syncopated tune on the drums. "Aiye yi o, Aiye le! (this world, this world is so difficult)!"

Although he sings in his own African tongue, Olatunji said, his music has universal appeal because it represents what he has felt, heard and experienced.

"You can unite people from all tracks of life when they're dancing to the beat of the music," he said.

Among the more popular pieces Olatunji has composed and performed are:

- "The Harvest Song and Dance"
- "The Island Groove"
- "The Chant to the Train Man."

The Chant hearkens back to the rural African train conductor who is known for his special attention to the passengers, all of whom he knows by name.

Olatunji equates the theme to bus drivers in various communities throughout the United States where the passengers may be poor and underprivileged, but the bus driver brings them together, making sure everyone is picked up and dropped off with a pleasant greeting and a smile.

Olatunji received his education from Morehouse College in Atlanta and at New York University. He has performed in such prestigious venues as Radio City Music Hall, the 1964 World's Fair and the Tonight Show. He has also founded the African Center for Culture in Harlem, New York.

Although he sings in his own African tongue, Olatunji says that his music has universal appeal because it represents what he has felt, heard and experienced.

Chamber concert series to open

Members of the Boston Chamber Music Society will supply the opening performance of the season for the Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula. They will appear at 8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 10 in Sunset Theater, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel. The concert will feature works by Beethoven, Copland and Brahms. Season tickets are $50. Individual concert tickets are priced at $15, $5 for those under 21. To learn more, call 625-2212.

Crossing Canada by rail

LAST MONTH my lively 83-year-old mother, accompanied by my sister, came out to visit from Massachusetts. I gave them the royal tour from Big Sur to Cannery Row, including lunch at Club XIX to celebrate my mother's recent second hole-in-one and to check out the restaurant's new decor reported in one of Joe Fitzpatrick's columns (it's OK). Several adventures later we left Carmel in a rental car heading north for Vancouver and our planned trans-Canada trip aboard the VIA Rail's premier blue and silver train, the Canadian.

Apron Strings

By Deborah Smith

For three days and four nights we journeyed nearly 3,000 miles, secure in this speeding silver caravan, gliding on ribbons of steel through five of Canada's provinces. During that time we chatted with train mates, made a new friend, read, played cards, slept, ate and daydreamed while watching the dazzling scenery which slipped past us at high speed.

We left Vancouver as night fell with my mother and sister settling into their cabin and me into my tiny roomette just down the car. We were immediately intoxicated by the nudging, swaying motion of the train. Our very first walk forward to the dining car we found required a special gait,"train legs"our steward called it.

We swept out of the Vancouver suburbs, railroad crossing bells clanging, and then shot out into the twilight-toned countryside propelled into the expectation of it all and our own thoughts.

Robert Louis Stevenson described his rail trip across the United States on the way to Monterey in 1879 this way: "The speed is so easy, and the train disturbs so little the scenes through which it takes us, that our heart becomes so full of the placidity and stillness of the country; and while the body is borne forward in the flying chain of carriages thoughts alight — "

British Columbia is known for tourism, lumber and mining. From my bed that night the full moon illuminated white water rivers racing through deep dark gorges. Early the next morning crossing over the Frazer River on what seemed like giant erector set trestles, we loped through sage brush-covered hills fringed with wildflowers. The Rocky Mountains run the length of this province and we kept lookout for moose, elk, coyotes and hawks.

Famed Jasper is the gateway to Alberta. The scenery was awesome, complete with waterfalls, lakes, jagged mountain peaks, thickly forested valleys and stands of white bark birches. During this section of the trip everyone wanted to be up in the glass-domed observation car.

Rolling out of the mountains, the countryside opened up into lush river valleys and cattle ranches. Originally, before the railroads, this sweep of Canada was dotted with fur trading outposts. The Hudson Bay Company was founded in 1812. Later, gold brought settlers into the region. Oil was discovered in 1947.

Saskatchewan presented vast expanses of prairie, boasting some of the largest grain farms in the world lying on top of some of the world's largest potash deposits. Ponds, rivers, lakes yielded countless fisher folk who wave as we race by. Summer cabins ring lake fronts. I see a small boy dive from the gunwale of a green canoe, a simple sight that will be forever caught in my mind's eye.

Manitoba is smack-dab in the heartland of Canada. My window view also exudes imaginary images of Indians pursuing buffalo, fur trappers knee-deep in snow and the Northwest Mounted Police keeping order as track was laid and settlements emerged and grew into villages, then towns, then cities like Winnipeg built at the junction of three rivers.

Continuing into Ontario ... meaning "shining waters" in Iroquois, this province contains one-fourth of the world's fresh water supply. Here the train is hemmed into the stark beauty of the billion-year-old Canadian Shield, climaxing our arrival into Toronto and our destination at noble Union Station, which was built in 1927.

The trans-Canada railroad was completed in 1885. First class passengers enjoyed luxurious sleeping cars like the Honolulu, which had full-sized bath tubs. They took their meals in Holyrood, sitting on tooled leather benches while dining on Lake Superior trout, Frazer River salmon, prairie hen or antelope steaks.

Restored to 1950s elegance

Today our train of 21 stainless steel cars which have recently been restored to 1950 elegance also exhibits an elegant dining car. Decorated in pink, jade and grays which reflect the passing landscape, the car is hung with original Canadian artwork. Twelve tables adorned with snow white tablecloths and china and pink napkins are complete with small vases of fresh pink and white carnations. Each meal's menu offers at least four entrees and a variety of desserts.

Four uniformed waitresses in lilting Canadian accents take your order. Mentioning that I write the cooking column for the Carmel, California newspaper, our waitress first asks the usual question, "Isn't Clint Eastwood the mayor?" and then invites me into the galley to meet chef Gil Poulliot. Sitting in the corner on a milk crate, I see that this is a movin' and shakin' place. One cook is presiding over the big black Garland stove while a prep cook is chopping a mound of onions and two dishwashers are hard at work all in time to rock music from Gil's little radio. All food is prepared to the specifications of the VIA's recipe book, which even instructs where to place the food items on the 10-inch plates.

That evening Gil suggested that I order the rack of lamb. The chops were laid on an onion/mango chutney and were accompanied by small roasted potatoes and honey glazed carrots.

Onion/Mango Chutney

1 finely diced medium onion
3 T. prepared mango chutney
1/2 cup dry white wine

Morning Glory Cottage 16" x "20 Oil

TAKING HIS CUE from a group of 19th century American painters call Luminists, Thomas Kinkade has built his career as an enormously popular, internationally published artist.

Several local galleries showcase paintings by Kinkade, who has come to be known as "America's Foremost Painter of Light."

"Like the Luminists, I strive for three visual aspects in my work: soft edges, a warm palette and an overall sense of light," Kinkade asserts.

His images are of country cottages, rain-washed streets and idyllic landscapes:all infused with the "Kinkade Glow."

Kinkade makes his home close to Carmel and he can often be seen painting on location.

Original paintings by Thomas Kinkade as well as prints can be viewed at the following locations: in Carmel – down the cobblestone path off Ocean Avenue called Der Ling Lane (626-1927) in the historic Tuck Box, home of the Thomas Kinkade Gift Gallery (622-1133); in the colorful Barnyard Garden (622-0939); at the Monterey Plaza Hotel on Cannery Row (657-2350); at Steinbeck Plaza Gallery, 685 Cannery Row, Building C (657-2365), and at the National Archive on Cannery Row, 550 Wave St., (657-1550).

Feature of the Week

Carmel Beach Cafe

The owners of Carmel Beach Cafe hope the reasonable prices at their restaurant don't "scare people." The Mediterranean-influenced Carmel eatery is co-owned by Nassir Elmachtoub, a veteran of Casanova, and Michael and Nancy Burgermeister, who own restaurants in Vail, Colo. They've assembled a wide-reaching menu where a salmon dinner is $9.95 and the filet mignon is less than $12! Nassir may be prejudiced, but he calls the prices "great," the food "fantastic."

Open for breakfast, lunch and dinner, Carmel Beach Cafe is a very accommodating establishment. Specials are offered daily and you can even order entrees "to go."

The wine list is peppered with California and European vintages that are priced at roughly half charged elsewhere. And their gelato is certain to appeal to the kid in everyone.

Dine at a friendly restaurant with Mediterranean flair. Carmel Beach Cafe is on the south side of Ocean Avenue between Mission and San Carlos. Call 625-3122.

Rare Finds on the Peninsula

Accents Windows & Walls

View the newest trends as well as classic decorating looks at Accents Windows & Walls, located at 26362 Carmel Rancho Lane, at the entrance to The Barnyard.

Susan Ashelford and her husband, Heath Onthank, have operated Accents Windows & Walls for eight years. Selection and customer service are the hallmarks of their business.

They specialize in interior window treatments — every piece custom-tailored to individual taste and needs. The shop also creates custom draperies, bedspreads and headboards.

Accents offers free in-home consultations. A full wallpaper department (600 sample books await your inspection!) rounds out the inventory.

"People who come in here and look for wallpaper say it's a pleasure to be in our shop. We get a lot of compliments," Susan observes.

To learn more, call 626-9054.

Cypress Coast Insurance

Cypress Coast Insurance and Financial Services, Inc. is now celebrating its fourth year in Carmel. Company President, William L. (Bill) Sisk, is a Chartered Life Underwriter and Chartered Financial Planner who also holds an M.B.A. He is joined by brokers Joe P. Stine and Clair A. Thomas, Jr. This trio shares 100 years of insurance underwriting experience between them.

Cypress Coast Insurance and Financial Services offers an extensive line of group and individual products in the life, health, dental and workers compensation areas. The company also offers securities, including mutual funds, managed accounts, variable annuities and variable life.

They emphasize estate planning, employee benefit planning and pension and profit sharing plans.

Contact the team at Cypress Coast Insurance and Financial Services. Offices are located in the Heather Glen Court at Mission and Eighth in Carmel-by-the-Sea. Call 625-1013 or (800) 923-LIFE.

The Mane Attraction

Mane Attraction, a salon recognized for giving clients an improved look, is undergoing a makeover of its own. This established Carmel business was purchased in August by stylist Jim Augustine, who has more than 20 years' experience in the beauty industry.

Carmel's full-service salon, Mane Attraction is located in the Sunset Terrace on Eighth and Mission. Returnees will note that the salon is being updated with sleek new hardwood floors, new paint and woodwork, new cabinets and up-to-the-minute styling equipment.

Trust the staff to supply the finest hair care, including cuts, color, permanents and styling, using the highest quality products. The salon also offers manicures, pedicures and makeup application. They welcome men, women and children.

Mane Attraction is open 9 to 6 Monday through Saturday and evenings by appointment.

Call 625-5008.

Teeleet Antiques

Step through the miniature vineyard of Shiraz wine grapes in Carmel Valley Village and you are in the domain of Teeleet Antiques.

Mark and Dorothy Enayati operate this resource for everything from centuries-old vases to woven baskets and trunks. The showrooms house a vast mixture of furniture, accessories and styles. Teeleet is noted for its Scandinavian stone pine furnishings, which fit right in with contemporary California living.

Your garden will also benefit from the discoveries at Teeleet Antiques. Old World craftsmen fashioned the Greek amphoras, stone troughs and doorways, even goat carts.

Teeleet Antiques is located at 25 Pilot Road, across from Tularcitos School in the Village, Carmel Valley. Look for the red English telephone booth! It is open Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and other days by appointment. Call 625-2134.

the JAZZ STORE

GRAHAM'S PORT

The Jazz Store, located at 236 Crossroads Blvd. Carmel California, 93923, in the Crossroads Shopping Center. Admission is $20 per person. $10 students (under 18). All events begin at 7:30 pm and performers play two sets. For more information call (408) 624-6432.

Friday October 4
Stephanie Haynes and Dave Mackay
From Southern California, vocalist Haynes and pianist Mackay share a superb sense of rhythm and exquisite taste in material. "Two On A Swing" is their new CD on Why Not Records.

Saturday October 5
David Friesen and Uwe Kopinski
Bassist David Friesen returns to the Jazz Store with German guitar virtuoso Uwe Kopinski. Friesen, who has played with many jazz legends considers Kopinski to be the greatest musician he has ever worked with. The duo has recorded Dancing With the Bass on the German ITM label.

Sunday October 6
Claudia Villela
Singer Claudia Villela's music echoes the musing sambas and bossa novas she heard while growing up in Rio de Janiero. Her five octave range and lilting voice, augmented with her own precise sense of phrasing is unique and has earned her a consistent following at jazz festivals world-wide.

Sat. Oct. 12
Bill Henderson
Originally from Chicago and inspired by the styles of Dick Haymes and Joe Williams, Henderson got his start singing with the original Ramsey Lewis trio. With a history as rich as his in music and acting as well, the evening should prove to be highly entertaining.

Mon. Oct. 14
Jack Sheldon
Trumpet player, singer and comedian Jack Sheldon appears at the Jazz Store with Bruce Forman on guitar, Vince Latiano on drums and Buddy Jones on bass. Seating for this intimate evening is limited to sixty persons. Tickets for this special event are $30.

Sat. Oct. 19
Mimi Fox Trio
Mimi Fox is a remarkable jazz guitarist whose work encompasses everything from sensitive reflection to swinging aggressiveness. She has been nominated for a Bay Area Music Award (Bammie) and currently records for Monarch records.

Sat. Oct. 26
Madeline Eastman
Vocalist Madeline Eastman draws accolades wherever she performs. She is an intuitive jazz singer, combining the rhythm, phrasing, and improvisations of a musician with a vocalist's feel for lyrics and a velvety warm, deep voice.

A funny thing happened on the way to escrow

Couple pursued Carmel home with dogged determination

RESIDENTIAL REAL estate is not a laughing matter. Most transactions involve a large portion of the principals' net worth, and the marketing, negotiating and the eventual closing of a transaction are hardly the stuff of humor.

The Annals of Real Estate

By Paul & Nellie Brocchini

Yet, as with all human endeavors, funny or weird things happen. This column, which will be published on an occasional basis, will share with Carmel Pine Cone readers the lighter and at times strange sides of real estate transactions in which we have been involved as well as anecdotes from friends, colleagues and readers.

Case of the savage dogs

One of our favorite anecdotes happened last year. We had a listing of a new house in Carmel that had a pair of seemingly savage dogs next door. The house was vacant, and when agents and clients toured the backyard, the neighbor's dogs would furiously hit the fence with a loud smack, stuff their snouts through the slats, bare their fangs and bark and growl up a storm. They were scary and not adept sales agents for us.

We endured this for awhile and eventually got a nice offer on the house. The offer was, however, contingent upon the owners of the property resolving the problem of the dogs.

Frankly, we were baffled by this request. We happened to know the brother of the person next door and called him to get his ideas. We suggested that his brother might train his dogs by using collars which would shock them when they barked, but were soon advised that wouldn't fly.

How about an interview?

Searching for ideas, we recalled that while assisting our friends, Jane and Joe Jewett, in obtaining a rental home in Carmel some years back, we had set up an interview for their dog with the owner's agents. The owners had a no-pets rule, but the Jewetts' dog was one of those perfect specimens who doesn't know he is a dog and acts like a perfectly respectable graduate of a school of fine etiquette and manners.

As it turned out, their dog interviewed well, and they got the place.

We decided to try it again. We called the agent of the buyers and told her we would like to set up an interview between her buyers and the dogs. You can imagine her reaction.

Initially she thought we were nuts, but inasmuch as she didn't have a better idea, she consented to ask her buyers if they would do it. Luckily, her buyers were sporting and

Revitalization of cities' downtown sections becoming a national trend

If the 1980s was the decade of the suburbs then the 1990s is shaping up as the era of downtown sections and urban living.

California Trends

By Bradley Inman

Once rejected as out of date, crime ridden and useless in the new suburban age, downtown sections are hot again with new stores, homes and entertainment centers as new life is breathed into these areas of urban neglect.

Downtown sections in San Jose, San Diego and Oakland are examples where investment is at record levels and once forbidden areas are becoming safer and more popular.

In some cases, calculated redevelopment projects have injected a new sense of place into these locations. For example, new convention centers in both San Jose and San Diego were anchors for other types of residential and commercial development.

Also, government subsidies for major housing projects and municipal land deals for commercial and mixed-use projects have helped.

An example is the Oakland Port Authority's Jack London Square, which is a $15 million urban development project that struggled its first few years in the early 1990s but is thriving today. The anchor commercial tenant is a massive Barnes & Noble Bookstore.

Attracting throngs

While large-scale developments are the foundation for urban recovery, smaller scale revitalization efforts have added texture and history. The historic gaslight district in San Diego, for example, has created a nightlife and brought hordes of young people to the downtown.

Along Oakland's waterfront and in San Francisco's South of Market district, artists, graphic designers and fashion houses also have inspired a recovery as new live-work housing projects are built.

Along with billions of dollars in reinvestment, larger demographic and social events are at work.

For example, the popular view that technology will drive people further out to rural areas as they work from their laptops is proving to be untrue.

"The widespread notion, fostered by futurists, that advanced telecommunications will lead to the rise of small towns and rural areas is not borne out," concludes the new report by the Taub Urban Research Center at New York University. Instead, "the Internet is reinforcing the economic and intellectual hegemony of a handful of states and regions in the United States."

Link with the Internet

Dubbed "Leaders and Losers on the Internet," the report examines which cities have the most and the least Internet host sites. They concluded that cities that host a lot of Internet sites are an indicator of where economic development centered on technology will increase.

Some of the communities with the most hookups were Santa Clara County, San Diego, San Francisco and Los Angeles. These are hardly rural bastions.

Those cities with the most hookups were deemed "leaders" in modern metropolitan growth. Internet equipment and services, according to the researchers, can be

BROCCHINIS: Deal could have gone to the dogs

open-minded people, and they agreed to the meeting.

At 9 a.m. one weekday morning we all gathered at the house next door to meet the dogs: Paul, the buyers with their agent, our friend and his wife and the neighbor's dog. The neighbor was at work, and the second dog, who turned out to belong to the neighbor's son and was only a part-time resident, was absent.

It was a strange meeting in that no one ever sat down. We just sort of circled around one another making small talk and not knowing exactly what to do. In my mind, I was supposed to be orchestrating this meeting, but the wisest course appeared to be to let it evolve and see what might happen.

As it turned out, the buyers and our friends found areas of common interest, and rapport began to develop. Meanwhile the dog, whom we will call Yahtzee, was minding her business in the backyard with nary a growl for the visitors.

By the time we called Yahtzee in, all of us were getting along famously, and the atmosphere was relaxed. Yahtzee must have sensed this, as she joined us with tail a-wagging and an entirely civilized demeanor.

The buyers had a chance to pet and introduce themselves to Yahtzee. Yahtzee, bless her, behaved like a princess. The condition of the "dog problem" was removed from the contract, and the sale was consummated. As far as we know, the new owners and Yahtzee are getting along just fine.

Batting 1,000

Since then, we have had one more successful dog interview with a rental property we were handling for an out-of-town owner. Our record on dog interviews so far is three successes out of three interviews.

There is a clear lesson to be drawn from this episode: bring people together when there are seemingly insoluble issues. This case was unique in that the issue was between the buyers and a third party. Usually the sticky problems are between buyer and seller.

It was the buyers who made the solution possible by naming the dogs as an issue to be resolved. They could have given up on the house and turned to something else, but they wanted the property and were willing to see if a solution to the barking and threatening dogs could be worked out.

We were lucky in that we had a previous relationship, albeit indirect, with the person next door. Still, had we not had the opportunity to introduce Yahtzee to the buyers, our deal would have gone to the dogs.

equated to the city infrastructure of the past, such as roads and bridges that laid the foundation for economic growth.

The urban trend also can be explained by demographic trends.

Urban areas are being flooded with people, which can bring negative social consequences but actually increases the purchasing power of the area and leads to more retail, housing and commercial investment.

Trendy times

The revitalization of downtown sections is a nationwide phenomena as cities such as Denver, Chicago and New York benefit from the trend.

Take Times Square, which in the 1980s was a symbol of urban decay, overridden by sex shops, crime and urban hustle.

"Times Square shaped an image of the entire city as an ugly, dangerous sleazy place," wrote Gregory Gilmartin in his new book, Shaping the City.

Today, this symbol of decay is on the rebound. The theater district is improved, media companies have flocked to the area and new buildings are constructed and old ones rehabilitated.

Of course, urban areas are still where most of the nation's poverty is concentrated and where crime is the worse.

But a metamorphosis of our downtown sections is taking place despite these persistent woes.

REFINANCE - The Inside Story

You undoubtedly have noticed that interest rates on home mortgages have been dropping for several months and currently are near 20 year lows. These rate fluctuations are generally due to changes in the economy — both in the U.S. and abroad. If you purchased your home when interest rate were higher, you may be thinking about re-financing your loan to a lower rate.

As experienced mortgage brokers, we can help your understand the potential benefits of refinancing and can ease you through the process. There are several points to consider. You will have to make application for the new mortgage and have your current income eligibility assessed. Depending upon how long you have had your present loan, a current appraisal of value may be required. You will also want to check to see if there is a prepayment penalty on your current mortgage.

One of the most important factors to consider regarding refinancing is the length of time you plan to remain in your home. Depending on your long range plans, it may not benefit you to refinance — we can help you work through the numbers to make an informed decision.

MOVIE REVIEW/Craig Arnott

Nostalgia junkie Tom Hanks turns in novice directing effort

FOR THOSE who pine for the time in American suburbia when cars sported fins and men were nicknamed Skip and Biff, not to worry. Tom Hanks has cemented his role as a bona fide nostalgia junkie by writing and directing That Thing You Do!, a reverent though transparent ode to blissful ignorance.

The film, which charts the meteoric ascendancy of a fictional pop band during the summer of 1964, suffers from its good intentions. It is little more than a sloppy feel-good to prop up Hanks' image as a genial everyman, and does little to add anything new to a genre that This is Spinal Tap (1984) has already slayed.

The story follows the grouping of four earnest, strikingly average guys in Erie, Pennsylvania who are linked by their similar tastes in music. Lead singer/guitarist Jimmy (Jonathan Scaech) is a moody control freak; rythym guitarist Lenny (Steve Zahn), mirroring Hanks' jovial side, is a wisecracking cynic; and the bass player (Ethan Embry) is so unnoticeable he could have been played by a plastic figurine.

Guy Patterson (Tom Everett Scott) is introduced when the band's original drummer breaks his arm while leapfrogging over a parking meter. During the first gig with the new lineup at a college talent show, Patterson proves himself the needed renegade by increasing the tempo of the band's signature song (from which the title is derived), thereby transforming an innocuous ballad into a danceable hit.

Hanks himself enters the frame as a slick Brian Epstein-ish manager, complete with the requisite skinny black tie, who grooms the band for heavily orchestrated stardom. This begins with the band's new name, The Wonders, adapted from the less sensible Oneders after fans unwittingly kept pronouncing it with a third syllable.

The best scene in the film occurs when the band's single first hits the airwaves in Erie. One by one the members, who have either heard the song squawking through their transistor or car radios, gleefully converge on the meek appliance store where Patterson works. Dancing around the stale displays of toasters and refrigerators, they are euphoric over their first true sign of deepening recognition.

But there are few variations in an otherwise predictable story trajectory. The colors of The Wonders' suits change from concert to concert. During one performance the drummer drops a cymbal. The dressing rooms become more lavish as the single snowballs in popularity. Petty arguments and infighting foreshadow imminent dissolution.

Wafer of a plot crumbles

So it's not surprising that the wafer of a plot crumbles before it can be digested. The band's migration to Los Angeles, where record company dons sneer behind fat cigars and the band is subjected to playing atmospheric background music during the filming of a tacky beach movie, announces a fall that is strangely free of drama or even irony. Since Hanks never bothered to detail the personalities of his characters, he is left with a string of one-liners dressed in cool clothes.

The cavity-forming title song would be forgettable if it wasn't played on roughly ten separate occasions during the course of the film. Virtually no song is captivating enough to merit that kind of exposure — unless of course it was altered a little, maybe reworked as an unplugged number or a Gregorian chant.

There is also the unique problem of creating a film about a fictional musical group: each time the band performs, and it is thuddingly often in That Thing You Do!, the story is naturally held hostage while the audience is treated to the spectacle of watching four people stand on a stage and move their lips.

Secondly, no matter how good the sound, music is diluted when fed through a lens and projected onto a wall. If nothing else, the hysterical fans onscreen in That Thing You Do! only reinforce the notion that a concert, not a film, is the best setting to appreciate music.

The director Hanks has a conventional eye that may have been shaped more by his earlier work in kitschy sitcoms than by his recent acting glories. Each shot is framed in a prefab, sterile way that seems conditioned to avoid flair and unnecessary risks.

Hanks falls into the growing category of successful, influential actors who are rewarded with creative autonomy; often the resulting effect is similar to that of the rich kid who wrecks the car his father gave him.

Maybe Hanks' directing career will benefit from the feedback he will receive from his novice outing. Until then, don't do That Thing You Do!

Great Chili Cook-Off sets C.V. ablaze

WHAT FUN it was to be at Holman Ranch to witness "Great Bowls of Fire!," the third annual chili cook-off that served as a benefit for the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce.

More than 300 tasters attended the colorful affair that included the best chili west of Salinas, "dummy" calf roping, harp solos by Bill Faulkner and music by The Heartstrings.

Of special note were the many carriages on display. We could swear that the western mannequin on top of one of the carriages was a good likeness of Chamber member Randy Randazzo.

In keeping with the "Great Bowls of Fire!" theme, individual dishes were named accordingly: Code Red, Barn Burning, Valley Lodge Lightnin', Three Alarm and Where's the Beef Chili.

Fifteen red-hot contestants vied for top honors on Monday, Sept. 23 as they stirred the pot for judges Wendy Brodie, Nick Craft, Karin Strasser Kauffman, Jack Swanson and Daniel Barduzzi.

Holman Ranch owner Dorothy McEwen announced the winners in each category: Best Amateur Chili went to Carmel Valley Community Center, Natural World and Rancho San Carlos. Best Decorated Chili went to Pacific Coast Catery, Thunderbird Book Shop and Holman Ranch. People's Choice Chili went to Los Laureles Lodge, Deli Treasures and Pacific Coast Catery.

The top professional chili makers were Pacific Coast Catery, Thunderbird Book Shop and Los Laureles Lodge.

More than three dozen merchants donated food, beverages and prizes. Those volunteering made the cookoff a huge success.

It was so much fun that many stayed late into the event. And one driver who we spotted leaving the ranch had one hand on the wheel and a cup of chili in the other!

■ Schooners opens at the Monterey Plaza Hotel

Oh, what a romantic, enchanting place is the new Schooners which opened Monday, Sept. 23 at the Monterey Plaza Hotel on Cannery Row.

This bistro on the bay was designed by Richard Brayton to resemble a schooner. A polished mahogany plank-style floor, white and yellow canvas sails, set beneath a sky of beautiful stars that change color, and a bar with roped lanyards around it, make you feel that you are really at sea.

The big plus is the fact that it lies directly over the greatest show of marine life in the harbor.

Visitors see huge kelp beds populated with otters and gulls, peaceful lines of pelicans flying overhead, while black cormorants stand on old cannery posts, observing all. The moon in the distance, cascading a long line of silver over the bay, is another plus for lovers as they lean against the rails.

The food samplings were indeed divine. Everyone kept looking toward the kitchen doors, hoping waiters would return again and again with the mini coho salmon, Maine lobster, oysters and shrimp and the most scrumptious mushroom and chicken sandwiches. I have never tasted a wine as good as the Monterey Plaza Rodney Strong Chardonnay.

At the christening ceremony, after General Manager John Narigi welcomed everyone, Monterey Mayor Dan Albert said it all. "We don't have to tell you what this hotel has done for Cannery Row and Monterey — success, success, success!"

■ Happy 80th birthday Carmel! You taste just great!

If you were there, you dined on samples from more than 20 local restaurants and were poured wines by three or more wineries.

And if you were like the faithful "Frequent Tasters" you made the honor roll in the program. Just ask Dick and Julie Hardin, Judy Higgerson, Larry Hoover, Ted and Ilona Leidig, Gary Luce, LuAnn Meador and Merv and Nancie Sutton.

The Carmel Business Association put on the eighth annual Taste of Carmel to celebrate the 80th birthday of Carmel-by-the-Sea at Carmel Plaza on Wednesday, Wednesday, Sept. 25.

Two decks filled with silent and live auction items were blanketed with tables of delicious salads, pasta, barbecued ribs, chicken and fish snacks, cookies, cakes and savory wines, all served by local chefs.

This year's Taste of Carmel party with some of the proceeds benefiting Carmel Youth Baseball was headed by Kathi Lewis of La Boheme restaurant. There were 165 silent auction items up for grabs.

During the live auction, the featured grand prize was two round-trip tickets on British Airways from San Francisco to London. Perhaps the most exotic prize auctioned was a golfing trip for two to the Furnace Creek Inn in Death Valley. Former Carmel resident and CBA Executive Director Toni Jepson said the Furnace Creek prize comes with airfare for two.

Jacqueline Walenski and Abraham Ramos, representing the Thunderbird Bookstore in the Barnyard, hold up their award won at the Chili Cook-off held Monday, Sept. 23 at the Holman Ranch.

Also on hand at the Taste of Carmel were recuperating Carmel Mayor Ken White and his wife Jean. The "Taste" was his first outing since his back operation. He looked healthy and rested.

This year's official poster was rendered by local artist Will Bullas, whose "Frolic by the Sea" depicts two ducks picnicking while other ducks look on. Just adorable!

Entertainment was provided by the Pacific Repertory Theatre, Eddie Erickson the Banjo Man and the Joe Lucido Trio.

Bert Cutino, designer Richard Brayton, general manager and vice president of the Monterey Plaza Hotel John Narigi and Monterey Mayor Dan Albert get ready to christen the new Schooners bistro, Monday, Sept. 23 at the Monterey Plaza Hotel.

Nancy Doolittle, Dr. Herbert Berman and his wife Elaine enjoy the evening Thursday, Sept. 26 at the MIIS presidents dinner at the Monterey Plaza on Cannery Row.

Jean and Carmel Mayor Ken White, and Bob and Elizabeth Albov enjoy the Taste of Carmel gala held Wednesday, Sept. 25 at the Carmel Plaza.

■ MIIS President's dinner thanks trustees

Whenever I'm with the Monterey Institute of International Studies (MIIS) people — trustees, benefactors, faculty and staff — I always feel grateful that people like these are around.

Graduating students are living testimonials to the help they garner from those people. At the president's dinner Thursday, Sept. 26 at the Monterey Plaza Hotel, all of the donors were thanked heartily.

MIIS President Robert Gard welcomed the benefactors, noting, "Education is having a tough time right now, so we need you!"

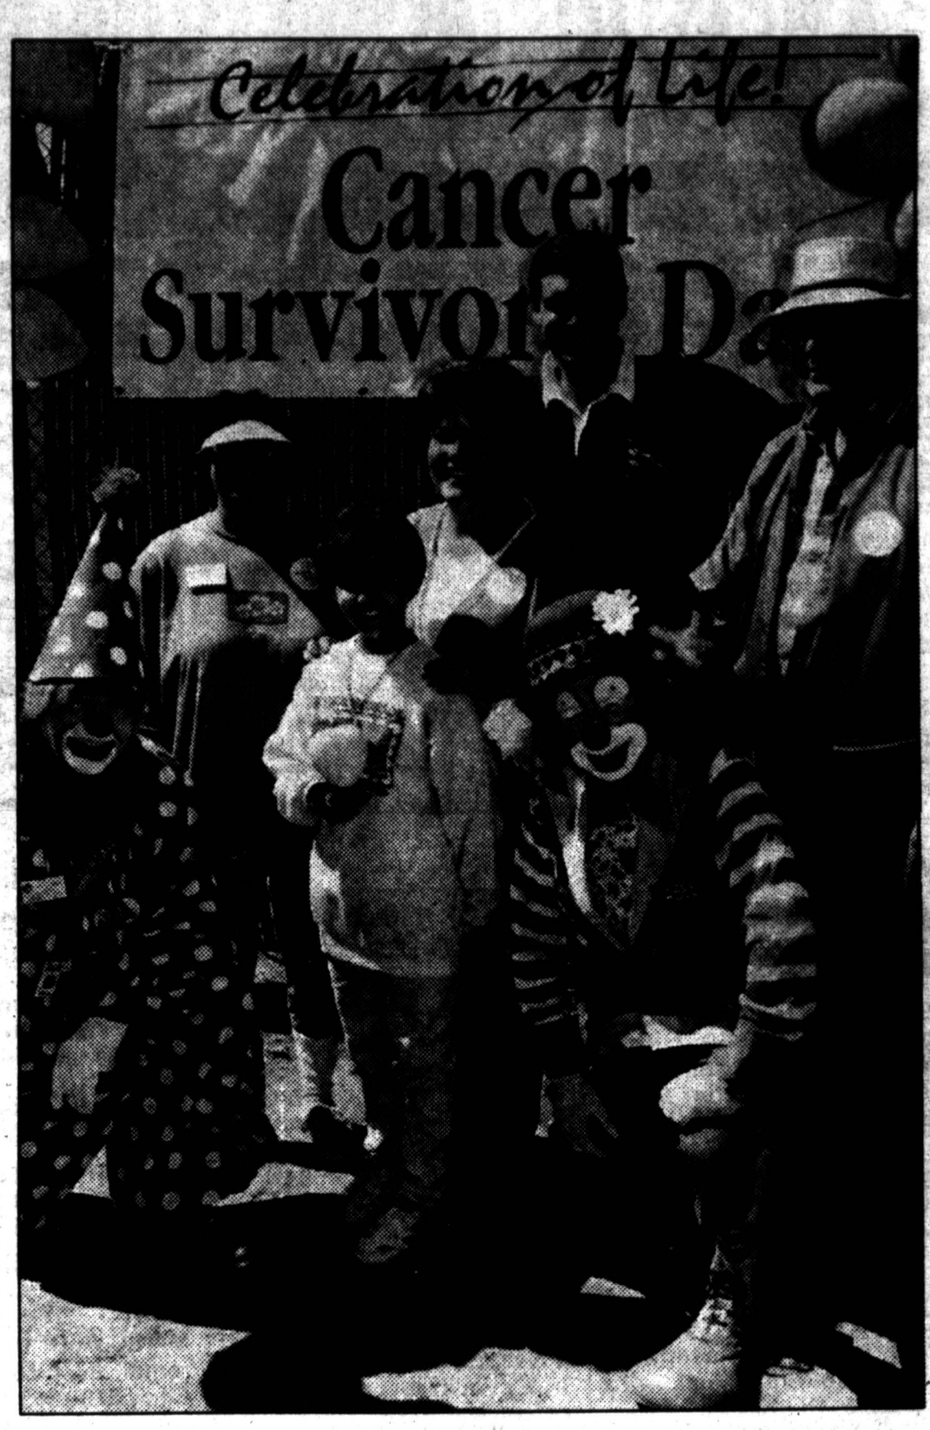
He thanked David and Chris Armanasco for providing all the wine for the cocktail hour and dinner. He asked that all trustees, benefactors and staff stand up and receive applause and especially thanked the Friends of MIIS, represented by outgoing president Ceci Brown and incoming president Judith Wright. The Friends raise funds for scholarships.

You should have heard guest speaker John McMahan, retired CEO and president of Lockheed. Speaking softly, he told how brutal international competition affects the United States. One senses that he's trying to awaken our great driving spirit to remain number one in the world.

McMahan, once the deputy director of the CIA, relayed facts like a silicon chip. When he ended saying that in the year 2020, China will be the leading industrial nation, followed by India, I found myself thinking, no, somehow we'll discover a way to remain numero uno.

Other attendees included Audrey Schrader, Stan Boyer, Bud Loewith, MIIS director of development Mark Thoreson, Herb and Elaine Berman and Nancy Easterbrook, daughter of Gen. "Vinegar" Joe Stillwell, World War II hero.

▲ WWII General Joe Stillwell's daughter Nancy Easterbrook and MIIS director of development Mark Thoreson enjoy a few laughs Thursday, Sept. 26 at the MIIS Presidents dinner, at the Monterey Plaza Hotel on Cannery Row.



▶ Clowns Earl "Sugar" Hicks and Leonard Greene flank (in back) Hunter Finnell, Glen Engholm and Belinde Ach, Cherelle Richardson (child) and Carolyn Sawyer, Saturday, Sept. 28 at the American Cancer Society first annual survivors party, at El Estero Park in Monterey.

■ American Cancer Society's first survivor's day party

It is difficult to describe the few hundred people who were there. All I can say is that my heart was in my throat as I listened to them at the American Cancer Society's first survivors' day picnic last Saturday at El Estero Park in Monterey, coordinated by Christine Hall.

Numbers on the nameplates of the survivors stood for the years they have remained free of cancer.

Rosalie Stewart, a handsome smiling woman with the number 36, was diagnosed with cervical cancer in 1965. Her doctor caught it early and saved her life. In 1989, her husband came down with leukemia and was cured. His number is 6. Rosalie calls herself blessed.

Hunter Finnell, well-liked sportscaster at KCCN TV-46, was diagnosed with cancer 20 years ago following a fall he took playing college football. Several doctors wanted to amputate his leg, but Hunter kept looking for other diagnoses, until he found doctors who worked with him using chemotherapy and radiology. Those of you who have heard Finnell speak know what he can do with a crowd.

Dr. Brad Tamler, a local radiologist/oncologist, told us how successfully cancer can now be treated using surgery, chemotherapy and radiology. He related the story of a young saxophonist who almost had to have his tongue removed, until they were able to save him using the three aforementioned techniques.

The boy later played for us in the band.

How does it go? "Sing praises to His name, He forgets not His own." Yeah, it was that kind of day.
